FOREWORD

I have great pleasure indeed in writing the introduction to this first comprehensive and authoritative catalogue of Jaipur Kapad-dwara of "The Royal Repository of Valuables". There have been, over the years, a number of requests from all over the world in regard to the collection but because they were not catalogued, most of queries could not be properly referred to.

An incomplete list of these was translated into English and was made available to the scholars in a cyclostyled form by the National Archives of India, New Delhi, in 1971.

I am extremely grateful to Dr. Chandramani Singh, Shri Gopal Narayan Bahura and Hakim Muhammad Ahmad Sahib, a Persian Scholar from Tonk, who have contributed to the hard work that has gone into the project and the result is there for all scholars and historians to judge in the future.

The collection includes Farmans issued by the Moghul Emperors to the Rulers of Amber and Jaipur, papers regarding ijaras taken by the Jaipur Rulers in different parts of the country, some are regarding appointment of Jaipur Rulers to important posts of Subadars and Faujdars etc. Many of these contain information about the bestowal of Robes of Honour, ornaments, horses, elephants and a number of deeds of sale of lands purchased by the Maharajas of Jaipur for inhabiting various Puras, Havelis and gardens wherever they were posted in the country.

These documents throw light on the history of imperial Moghuls in Delhi, contain the order of the powerful 'Nurjehan' to Mirza Raja Jai Singh not to be led away by Shah Jehan, Prince Khurram, Muhammad Shah's dependence on the statesmanship of Maharaja Sawai Jai Singh, his Farmans requesting the Maharaja to come to the capital immediately either for consultation or to suppress the disturbances in the vicinity of Agra and Delhi which are conspicuous.

I do hope that the scholars and historians will succeed in capturing the spirit of the conditions prevailing in Jaipur State during Moghul Imperialism, Maratha Uprising and the British Sovereignty through the contents of these documents as presented in this volume.

It is the first publication of Jaigarh Public Charitable Trust where this collection was on loan for some time. The publication is partly financed by the National Archives of India, New Delhi, to whom we are extremely grateful for their assistance and support.

We are hoping to bring out the next volume of catalogue of maps and plans in continuation of this collection.

INTRODUCTION

The importance of archival documents need not be overemphasised for those who are interested in writing and studying history. Next to stone inscriptions, copper plates, seals and coins, come the records written on paper. After its invention, paper became the most popular medium for writing and written documents are regarded as one of the most authentic sources of information of events that took place in the concerned period.

The records of the Mughal period fortunately came down to us, as these were very well maintained and in most cases kept according to the archival principles. These are also valuable as being contents of important social and economic history of the medieval India together with the political and administrative set-up of that period. These papers reflect on the nature of the society and the changing patterns of those days. Also, there is much material containing information on agrarian relations, prices, trade, trade-routes and the economic life of the people.

Supplementary information and local versions of the Mughal policy can be gathered from the provincial histories and the accounts of petty states that existed in the Mughal Empire. Such records throw light on matters of administrative practices followed by the Mughals. These are none-the-less important for collecting statistical, geographical and biographical evidences of that period. In some cases these offer a virgin field for the study of many important problems of history.

As Sir Jadunath Sarkar puts in, "climatic conditions and the anarchy that followed the disintegrations of the Mughal Empire in the 18th century and the wars of different states with one another did not very much favour the preservation of official records of the Mughal period in India."[1]

Fortunately, the erstwhile Amber-Jaipur state could escape the usual fate and a bulk of its record was saved from destruction. Formerly, the documents were stored somewhere at Amber where, of course, the effects of white ants and other climatic conditions could not be avoided. Many documents were lost, destroyed or misplaced during the shifting of the capital from Amber to Jaipur. Still as many as 35 volumes or so could be prepared by transcription from the available records for Sir J. N. Sarkar, when he was commissioned to write an authentic History of the Jaipur State, which has since come out in 1985 under the able editorship of Dr. Raghubir Sinh of Sitamau.

Sarkar, however, considered the copies of the akhabarat or newsletters of the Mughal Court as the most important documents of the Jaipur State Archives. These were called akhabarat—i—Darbar—i—mualla in which every day minutes of the Emperor's Court were noted down according to the "day of the week, the date and the month of the regnal year of the Sovereign."[2] He further regrets that a part of such a collection was removed by Col. James Tod to England where they may be seen in the library of the Royal Asiatic Society, London.[3] Whatever was left here consisted of a series of sheets dealing with the Vice-regal courts at Gujarat, Agra and the Deccan together with the earlier copies of the proceedings at Agra and Delhi.

In a Descriptive list of Farmans, Manshurs, and Nishans, published by the Directorate of Archives, Government of Rajasthan, Jaipur in 1962, a mention is made of 290 documents addressed to the rulers of Jaipur State. Out of these 140 are farmans, 18 manshurs and the rest nishans. These were in addition to the other documents which were related to the day to day affairs of the State, correspondence with the rulers of sister states and the governors of other provinces, orders issued by the rulers in the name of jagirdars, vakil's reports and dastur komwar and also the revenue papers such as adasattas, siyahas, tojis, waqaya papers, mamla and matalba papers, fards and nirkh bazar etc.

When the task of writing 'the History of Jaipur State, was entrusted to Sir J. N. Sarkar in 1932, all the papers of the Jaipur State Archives were made available to him for consultation. Copies of such documents, considered essential by him, were prepared and sent to his destination. Along with these, the family documents, which were preserved in the Kapad-dwara, were also shown to him. It is understood that these documents were placed in the custody of the Superintendent, Diwan-i-Huzuri, Jaipur and Dr. Sarkar requisitioned copies of some of the documents out of these for his purpose. Thus when Sir Jadunath Sarkar's work was taken as completed these documents were returned to the Kapad-dwara. A list of these remained in the Diwan-i-Huzuri (later merged into Rajasthan State Archives). Consequently, when the department was shifted to Bikaner, the list also went there. Later, the then Director of Archives produced a list of more than 1600 documents in the National Archives, New Delhi where a limited number of cyclostyled copies was prepared in 1971[1] for the use of scholars and students of Indian history. There is a remarkable difference in the contents as mentioned in the above list and the available collection.

The most important collection in Kapad dwara is that of the farmans issued from the Mughal court to the rulers of Jaipur. Some of the farmans bear the emperors' remarks in their own hands on the margin or at the top. These farmans range from the time of Emperor Jahangir (1605-1628) to Bahadur Shah II Zafar (1837-1857) which indicate the intimate relations of the rulers with the emperors.

The oldest farman[2] (no. 283), in the collection, dated 12th Bahman mah Ilahi in the year 1622 (A.D.) was issued by the Empress Nurjahan on behalf of Jahangir. In this farman she advised Mirza Raja Jai Singh not to be led away by Shah Jahan, then Prince Khurram, and he should better make every effort to protect the fort and lands. Also that he should always keep one thousand horsemen with him and if Shah Jahan sent any army or tried to instigate him he should not trust at all. An increment in the mansab is also promised in the farman. It also bears a seal and tughara of the Empress.

Next to this are copies of farman nos. 176-177. They are important as these provide the much awaited information regarding the acquisition of land for constructing Tajmahal from Mirza Raja Jai Singh in A.D. 1633 and that four havelis belonging to Bhagawandas, Madho Singh, Rupasi Vairagi and Chand Singh, son of Suraj Singh, were granted in compensation. A considerable number of farmans bears Emperor Muhammad Shah's orders, instructions and requests for immediate presence in the court in his own handwriting with a lead pencil (then called firanghi qalam), (nos. 123 and 124). Emperor Farrukhshiyar and Shah Alam also wrote to Maharaja Sawai Jai Singh and his sons Ishwari Singh and Madho Singh I. One farman carries a couplet in Persian while the other is in prose in Nagari letters written by the Emperor Muhammad Shah (Fig. no. 43, nos. 192 and 193).

Most of the farmans are about the territories held by the Jaipur rulers as vatan, jagirs and the ijara lands granted to them from time to time. The ijara used to be a kind of contract for farming and collecting revenue of a pargana, a mauza or a part of it. As a general practice, the ijaradars were required to write an agreement to pay the fixed amount on a fixed date. As soon as the ijara was granted, an acceptance was written in the form of a qabooliyat by the ijaradar. In the sanction in his name it was enjoined on him to look after the welfare of the subjects and watch the interest of the State Contracts were also given for the rahdari taxes. The ijara was usually granted for a specific period but could be extended on the same or revised terms. The ijaradar enjoyed the same powers as the imperial revenue officers in respect of farming and revenue collection during the period of ijara. It depended on his vigilance and efforts to increase the jama or revenue of the villages or the pargana beyond the fixed or estimated amount.

The rulers of Jaipur State began to take ijaras from the time of S. Jai Singh. His sons also followed this practice, but they were prudent enough to take ijara of such mahals, tehsils and parganas as were adjoining their vatan lands. Prof. S. P. Gupta is of the opinion that, "Jaipur thus acquired its position as a major state of Rajputana in the first half of the 18th century as a cumulative result of the position enjoyed by its rulers in the service of the Mughal emperors. The expansion of the territorial jurisdiction of the rulers did not take place essentially as a result of military conquests but mainly due to the transfer of various parganas in course of time by the Mughal authorities to the Jaipur rulers".[1] These parganas were given sometimes in jagir and sometimes on ijara. All these lands were included and consolidated as part of the Jaipur state with the decline and disintegration of the Mughal empire.

There are some very important farmans regarding the appointments of Jaipur rulers on important posts of subedars and faujdars etc., which throw significant light on their careers and the important roles played by them, in the conquest and consolidation of certain distant provinces, as viceroys of Mughal emperors. Their administrative talents were also appreciated by the Mughal emperors. The study of M.S. Jai Singh's career can not be complete without reference to the farmans in this collection. Kunwar Shiva Singh, the eldest son of Sawai Jai Singh, has remained an ignored character in the history of Jaipur while there are some farmans which speak of his intelligence and capability in administration, for example in farman no. 195, S. Jai Singh is ordered to be present in the court entrusting the charge of faujdari of Mathura to Kunwar Shiva Singh. Also mansab and gifts were granted to him for his commendable services[2] (no. 63).

Some farmans contain informations regarding bestowal of robes of honour, ornaments, horses and elephants besides jagjr to the rulers of Jaipur. Even the Emperor Aurangzeb and his successors, who were gradually growing weak, became dependable to the statesmanship of S. Jai Singh. Every now and then they issued farmans requesting him to attend the court immediately for consultation or to suppress the disturbances created by the Jats in the vicinity of Agra. On his achieving success, S. Jai Singh was granted robe of honour of vasanti colour and the other (no. 40) embroidered one for his meritorious services. 2. Sir Jadunath Sarkar records the date of M. K. Shiva Singh's death as July-August, 1724 and says that he was twenty-two years of age at that time. Thus his date of birth falls in the year 1702. Sarkar further informs that he was father of two sons at the time of his death. Rawal Harnath Singh of Dundlod has given the name of his mother as Anandkunwar, daughter of Udyot Singh Gaur of Shivapur Badod, and those of his sons as Devi Singh and Jagat Singh, who were imprisoned and later killed in Lawa.

   There are some papers containing informations about Kr. Shiva Singh in the Rajasthan State Archives, Bikaner. He had two wives, one Bagheliji and the other Jadamji of Hathikheda of Suba Ajmer (RSA no. 462-3, Dastur Komwar). It is also recorded (in nos. 480 and 441) that on Kartik budi 7, 1778 (October 16, 1721) Emperor Muhammad Shah received Kr. Shiva Singh and granted a mansab of five thousand and three thousand sawars along with the insignia of naubat, a pearl necklace, a jewelled dagger, siropao with an elephant and a horse. The Emperor honoured him by holding his hands. He was also granted the suba of Akbarabad on Baisakh budi 11, 1780 (April 20, 1723) with a siropao.

   The story of Shiva Singh's death has remained an unsolved mystery in the history of Jaipur etc., is addressed to M.S. Jai Singh by the Emperor Muhammad Shah in his own hand-writing in Devanagari characters. Again S. Jai Singh was applauded for settling matters with the Marathas in Malwa and Gujarat. It was through his efforts that Kushal Singh, son of Raja Sahu Chhatrapati, was granted a jagir of Rs. 10,00,000/- in Malwa and thus the Maratha disturbances could be suppressed (no. 196). In a farman (no. 68) Muhammad Shah agreed with the advice of S. Ishwari Singh (son of S. Jai Singh) to pay Rs. 20,00,000/- to Balaji Rao for clearing Bengal of the Maratha forces under Bhaskar Rao and Raghu.

The title of Sawai and Mahi Maratib[1] was allowed to be continued like his father by S. Madho Singh together with the titles of Raj Rajendra and Sar-Amde Raj Hai Hindustan, in addition to a mansab of Rs. 7000/-, 4000 do aspa and an inam of Rs. 1,50,00,000 dams The insignia of Mahi Maratib was also conferred on him by Alamgir II.

The rulers of Jaipur had been very anxious to take possession of the Ranthambhor fort but it did not become possible for a long time. Ultimately, S. Madho Singh I succeeded in getting a farman from Shah Alam II in 1754 (Figs. 8-10, nos. 26 and 38), regarding grant of Ranthambhor fort in lieu of his good services rendered in settling the disturbances.

The last but most decorative and beautiful farman is from Emperor Bahadur Shah II in the name of M.S. Ram Singh II dated A.D. 1839. It is complimentary (Fig. 52).

These farmans are written on thick hand-made paper and bear Imperial seals and sometimes a tughara. In the seals the names of the predecessors of the issuing emperors are also written in small circles (Fig. 10).

Nishan : Nishan is an order issued by a member of the Imperial family to anyone except the Emperor. It was regarded equivalent to an order issued in connection with grants, daily allowances, etc.

The only nishan in this collection is one issued by Empress Nurjahan under her own seal and tughara on behalf of Emperor Jahangir to Mirza Raja Jai Singh dated 21st Khurdad (A.D 1627). In this nishan the Maharaja is informed about the grant of a mansab of 4000 and of pargana Chatsu. He is advised to submit his application for further grants (Fig. 11).

Parwana used to contain royal orders carried through the vazir or any other close servant of the emperor.

A number of parwanas, in the collection, issued from the Imperial Court is in the name of Provincial Governors ordering them not to interfere in the matters of puras established by the Jaipur rulers at Mathura, Kabul, Peshawar, Lahore, Vaikunthpur (Bihar), Ujjain, Ellichpur, Aurangabad, etc. Also such parwanas contain orders in the name of mutsaddis, muqaddams, chaudharis, qanoongos and the cultivators of certain villages, parganas and sarkars granted to the maharajas in inam and ijara either directly or by transfer; some of the parganas and sarkars were Mathura (Islamabad), Vrindavan (Mominabad), Moazzamabad, Khori, Kiara alias Bhangarh, etc.

There are some important parwanas regarding withdrawal of rahdari taxes and the tax of bader[2] (Fig. 70), non-escheat of property of the deceased sanyasis, faqirs and Jain monks issued on recommendation of M.S. Jai Singh.

No. 641 (Fig. 69) is about the foundation of the new city of Sawai Jaipur near Amber and carries Imperial sanction for entering the name of the newly inhabited city in place of Amber in the registers of the Mughal court as desired by the Maharaja. This parwana was issued under the seal of Qamaruddin Khan Chin Bahadur on the 25th Ramzan, 15th regnal year of Muhammad Shah (April 28, 1733).

There are several parwanas issued by Maharana Sangram Singh of Udaipur to his nephew Kunwar Madho Singh, son of M.S. Jai

1. Mahi= 'of the moon' also 'of the fish'; maratib — status or honour. It was first introduced in Persia by Khusru Parvez and Nuh Usmani. Later, the Mughals adopted it and conferred on their subordinate princes who were entitled to carry the insignia of golden fish, the moon and the lion's face.
2. The word bhadar means clean shaving of hair. This is a practice that when an elderly person dies, all male members in the family of the deceased get themselves shaved. During the Mughal regime a tax was levied on such occasions which was known as the tax bhadar.

Singh, granting him the jagir of Rampura with a number of other villages (no. 1413). In turn, Kunwar Madho Singh also issued parwanas granting jagirs to dhaibhai Nagraj and others (no. 1477).

There is an interesting series of letters and bonds exchanged and executed between Sawai Jai Singh and Rao Budh Singh of Bundi regarding a forged son by the latter's wife Chundawatji. Rao Budh Singh gave in writing to S. Jai Singh that he disowned Bhawani Singh as his son. The document is signed by other sons and grandsons of Gopinath, the Rao's ancestor (no. 1430).

Bonds, sammatipatras and other papers about various sects of the 18th century.

It has been observed that the early Kachhawahas were Vaishnavas and worshippers of Krishna and Radha as a contemporary poet of Man Singh I puts it, "Their hands were sanctified by worshipping Krishna, the lord of Radha", राधाधवाराधनपूतपाणि : Still before the time of Man Singh, Prithwiraj had turned into a worshipper of Ram at the instance of his Ramanandi guru Krishnadas Payohari. But we have no documents in this collection to support these evidences.

From the literary compositions by and for Sawai Jai Singh it appears that at first he was a Ramaite, but from A.D. 1722, since he was appointed subedar of Mathura and faujdar of Vrindavan, he felt inclined towards the Gaudiya Krishnaites. Quite sensitive and imaginative as he was, he applied his thoughts to the outward differences that existed in different sampradayas and induced to bring about a reconciliation among them.[1] There was not much difference between the worshippers of Ram and those of Krishna except the पद्धति – the mode of worship. He arranged conferences with the heads of these sampradayas and discussed various modes of worship. Ultimately, he found that there was no vital difference in their philosophy.[2] He eventually declared that they all preached the same principles but in their own way. Vrindavan Deva (of Neem-ka-Thana) of Nimbark sampraday presided over the third conference held at Jaipur. His verdict was that the principles announced by the Maharaja were agreeable to all the four sampradayas (चतु: सम्प्रदाय).

Again, there was a controversy about the worship of Radha and Krishna together. One group held that Radha was never married to Krishna and hence she was parakiya. Others pleaded that Radha was the eternal आल्हादिनी शक्ति of Krishna who was the Supreme Godhead and so they regarded her as स्वकीया swakiya. Sawai Jai Singh had a long correspondence with the abbots of various orders, which is embodied in the sammatipatras catalogued at nos. 1501 to 1507, 1516, 1517, 1519, 1521, 1524, 1525, 1526, 1527 and 1528 etc.

Still there was an other sect of the sadhus who did not stick to the strict rules of worship but held self-imposed responsibility of protecting the Vaishnavite forum Of these some Vaishnavas banded together to constitute a militant body. These were mainly the ramanandis, vairagis and sanyasis. They carried arms and led a sort of soldierly life together with the performance of the worship of their deities. Their groups were called akhadas. Again, there were dadupanthis who did not worship any idol but took to the practice of repeating the name of 'Ram' and undertook gymnastic exercises regularly. They were called nagas also and formed military units or jamats.

Dadupanthis call themselves as the followers of Brahma Sampraday or community known as dadupanth being originated by the saint Dadu, born in a Nagar Brahman family of Ahmedabad. They do not worship idols, but keep the book Daduvani – a collection of Dadu's sayings with great reverence and call that place पालक्यां (palkyan). They offer prayers to this book and worship it as other idolators worship the idols of their gods. They regard this book as their guru, representative of Brahma (ब्रह्म).

The first Kachhawaha ruler who came in contact with Daduji was Bhagwantdas when the saint came to Sambhar and then to Amber in 1632 V.S. (A.D. 1575). It is said that Raja Bhagwantdas took Daduji to the court of Akbar who was very much impressed by his saintliness. He is said to have come to Amber again during the time of Man Singh when he initiated Rajjab who was dressed as a bridegroom and diverted himself to asceticism from worldliness. The dadupanthis consider themselves as claimants of the 13th kotari (house) of the Kachhawahas of Dhundhar because a son of Bhagwantdas, Prithvidip had adopted Dadupanth. The dadupanthis say that Man Singh offered a jagir of 25 villages to Prithvidip but he declined saying that whatever the king wanted to offer should be given to Shyamdas, his disciple. Then the Maharaja fixed a bhet of Rs. 1000/- per pargana. The disciples of Shyamdas ultimately established their jamats and akhadas and distributed the bhet realized from the parganas till late. They organised themselves as a military force and took part in several battles. Evidently the dadupanthis kept arms and practised the use of sword, patas, lathis, etc. They had formed themselves as a semi-military organisation. Their use was made in realising revenues from villages and parganas, and in deciding political disputes by their force. A certain number of them was detailed to nizamats and tehsils for that purpose. During the time of Sawai Man Singh II they were organised like a regular regiment under a separate Bakhshi. Ultimately, this regiment was disbanded in 1940's.[1]

In 1720's Sawai Jai Singh became actively involved in religious reforms. He called several conferences and laid down some rules for observation by all the ascetics and followers of different sects – the ramanandis, vairagis and the dadupanthis also. They were bound to follow the rules based on the shastras as compiled in सिद्धान्तैक्य प्रकाशिका[2]. Ordinarily, the rules were that the Sadhus would dine in separate rows and food would be served to them separately. The defaulters would not be allowed to take their seat in the row. No one should consume the residue of other's food They could marry by permission of the authority. Untouchables would not be made disciples. All the ascetics coming from dvij families should take the sacred thread (जनेऊ). A shudra was not allowed to take sacred thread. All these principles and others are referred to as the principles laid down by Sriji (the Maharaja) in various documents.

While other ascetics such as vairagis, ramanandis, etc., were restrained from keeping arms, the dadupanthis continued to do so on the basis of the general principles laid down by the Maharaja and a bond was taken from them in writing mentioning that they would abstain from keeping women and from initiating them. They would not undertake business and accumulate wealth. The Maharaja also made it compulsory that the Mahant would be a Brahman and that they would not mix with the Muslims (no. 1282). In Jai Singh's code celibacy was not enforced on mahants and sadhus rather, if anyone was found going astray, he was compelled to marry.

Lately, when Sawai Jai Singh became inclined to the Gaudiya sampradaya, he wanted their abbots also to observe the general principles as laid down by him. Further, he involved himself in resolving the outward differences that existed in the Vaishnavite sampradayas and the differences between the followers of Gaudiya Sampraday itself. He, therefore, called opinions from the learned ones of Vrindavan, Navadwip, etc. They all responded and said that the goal, means and methods of worship were the same as described by Sanatan Goswami, Rupa Goswami, Gopal Bhatt and Jiva Goswami in their works. The virtuous Vaishnavas and other learned professors agreed to follow the principles. These principles were endorsed by Goswami Subalanand Sharma of the temple of Madanmohanji, Shyamacharan Sharma of the temple of Radha Damodarji, Jagannathdeva Sharma of the temple of Sri Govind Devaji and Gopiraman Sharma of the temple of Shri Gopinathji in Vrindavan. Also a number of Vaishnavites at Navadwip gave their consent to these doctrines. Document no. 1504 bears signatures of six Vaishnava pandits of the court of Gopal Singh, the Malla king of Vishnupur. It is dated Bangla samvat 1041 (A.D. 1735). Similarly, about 20 pandits of the court of Raja Krishnachandra Rai of Navadwip seconded the views of the Maharaja in document no. 1506. The pandits and other learned persons of the court of Sri Kirtichandra nripati of Burdwan (A.D. 1702-1740) also agreed with the theory, means and aims of worship as propounded by Sri Vishnu Swami, Sanatan Goswami, etc. and adopted by S. Jai Singh in his सिद्धान्तैक्यप्रकाशिका (Cat. no. 1503).

Deeds of sale, rent and other papers related to properties of the rulers of Amber and Jaipur.

The rulers of the Kachhawaha house were very fond of building their personal estates wherever they were posted during the Mughal regime. Not only in their jagir lands but in Imperial areas also, they purchased lands and houses at market rates and inhabited their new puras from Kabul to Bengal and Ujjain to Burhanpur. A fairly large number of deeds of sale in connection with the purchases made by them is available in this collection. There are parwanas issued from the Imperial Court in the names of amils, faujdars and subedars of different parganas in which they were instructed under orders of the emperors not to interfere in the puras inhabited by these rulers. Such orders were issued when a new emperor came on the throne or a new raja succeeded his father. Sometimes the authorities on the spot created troubles and disallowed possession of the property by the men of the rajas. It was a practice that when a raja died the Imperial authorities took the properties over and released it only on receipt of a new parwana. Similarly when an emperor expired, the property automatically came under the jurisdiction of the provincial officer who released it only under order of the new emperor

A list of the puras and properties can be drawn up on the basis of these documents as under :—

Pura at Banaras (Manmandir)

Pura at Lahore

Pura in Bihar (Vaikunthpur)

Pura at Peshawar

Pura at Kabul

Pura at Ujjain

Puras at Aurangabad, Burhanpur and Ellichpur.

Pura and garden Rahatbakhsh in the capital Shajahanabad (Delhi).

Pura and garden at Akbarabad (Agra).

Jaisinghpura at Allahabad.

Bishanpura in Mathura.

Sawai Jaisinghpura at mauza Fatehpur Kachhawahan.

Zamindari of village Chaumuha in Mathura.

Zamindari of villages Math, Jahangirpur and Pancholi.

Ghat, dewankhana and kunj at Vrindavan

Land at Chirghat, Vrindavan.

A number of plots of land in Islamabad (Mathura).

Another kunj purchased from Charandas in Vrindavan.

A number of plots in the muhalla Bibi Raji at Banaras.

Following vakils and mukhtars were instrumental in making these purchases of land on behalf of Maharaja Bishan Singh, M. S. Jai Singh and M. S. Ishwari Singh—Panna Mian (a enuch brought by Maharaja Bishan Singh from Mughal emperor's court), Sri Vyas vakil, Ramnath vakil, Sheodas, vakil, Panditrai vakil, and Vasudeo.

They inhabited katras and muhallas on lands purchased by them at Banaras, Allahabad and Agra and constructed shops and siphalaposh houses and let them on rent to the inhabitants who executed rent-deeds to the vakils of the Maharaja. When the affairs of these properties grew to a considerable extent during the time of M. S. Ram Singh, an officer designated as munsarim purejat was appointed to control these puras and houses. Sometimes a vakil was promoted as munsarim who was assisted by one or more vakils or gumashtas. The names of the following vakils and munsarims occur in these documents—Rai Ratan Singh and his assistant Ghasiram, Rai Manna Singh, Sahibram, Jhunthalal gumashta, Thakur Prasad, Jwala Prasad, Pandit Shivadin, Pandit Ishwari Prasad, Jiwanram, Saiyad Qurban Ali and Man Singh, Mukhtar-e-am.

Of these, Thakur Prasad and Ishwari Prasad became munsarims of purejat. The practice of purchasing properties continued until the time of M. S. Madho Singh II. A mention may be made of some important properties purchased by M. S. Ram Singh II and M. S. Madho Singh II.

A kothi was purchased from Seth Lakshmi-Chand Govind Das of Mathura through Pandit Shivadin for Rs. 75,000/- in A. D. 1863 (no. 513). M. S. Ram Singh also purchased land measuring 28 bighas and 6 biswas, 10 biswansi from Ladli Begum through Saiyad Qurban Ali, vakil (no. 505) and an estate, house and the surrounding area from Alexander Chisholm, Head clerk to the Dy. Collector, Shimla for Rs. 10,500/- (no. 518). The place was known as Lansdowne.

M. S. Ram Singh got a house repaired at a cost of 8999-1-2 at Agra. The house originally belonged to Ladli Begum which passed on to the Maharaja through Seth Radha Kishan Govind Das (no. 519).

M. S. Madho Singh purchased a plot of land at Agra through his mukhtar, Man Singh (no. 514) and also one plot of land measuring 28 bighas and 19 biswas in Vrindavan for constructing a temple (no. 209). It is interesting to note that a plot of land measuring 4 bighas, 13 biswas and 12 biswansis was rented to Maharao Kishan Singh of Sirohi by the vakil of M. S. Madho Singh in 1897 (no. 1320).

The vakils and munsarims of purejat pursued and pleaded the cases regarding these lands and properties in the concerned courts. Some decisions are noted below but unfortunately these documents are not traceable in the collection[1] :—

— The Chief Commissioner confirmed the possession of the Maharaja of Jaipur on Jaisinghpura Burhanpur (no. 644).

— The villages Fatehpur Kachhawahan and Rajapur in district Allahabad belonged to the Maharaja (M. S. Ram Singh II) (no. 207).

— The Nizam of Hyderabad issued an order on 3.11.1873 that the land measuring 40 bighas in Aurangabad belonged to the Maharaja of Jaipur as his property (no. 199).

— Dy. Commissioner, Ellichpur informed the Maharaja that five villages were bought by the Jaipur ruler in the district Ellichpur (no. 516).

— The Dy. Commissioner released the puras in Aurangabad to the Maharaja (no. 662).

— Jaisinghpura in Suba Garhi was released to the Maharaja (no. 665).

Documents on relations with the Marathas[2]

Mirza Raja Jai Singh's and his son Ram Singh's dealings with Shivaji are well known historical facts. Sawai Jai Singh's association with the Marathas started with his appointment in Malwa as Deputy to Prince Bedar Bakht in 1705—06.

The Marathas were expansionists and they considered Malwa as the gateway to Northern India. They were making efforts to pierce through this part of the country since 1698. The raid of Mandalgarh by Udaji Panwar in 1698, that of Damori by Krishnaji Samant in 1699 and of the environs of Ujjain in 1703 are the speaking examples of their dexterous efforts in this direction. Sironj was besiezed by Neemaji Scindia in 1704. Thus the Maratha influence had grown so much that the Emperor Bahadur Shah meekly recognised Sahu as the legitimate successor of Rajaram. By the year 1711 the Marathas began to make regular raids in Malwa. Sawai Jai Singh took over as Governor of the Province in 1714 (no. 115). He made some successful operations against the Ruhelas and other rebels for which the Emperor congratulated him and awarded a khilat (no. 40).

But this was a short lived peace. After some time the Maratha infiltration again started. S. Jai Singh, however, rushed with ten thousand sawars and gave the intruders a crushing defeat at Sandhora on May 10, 1715. Soon after S. Jai Singh was called to the Imperial Court and there the Marathas crossed the Narmada to ransack the parganas of Barwah, Dharampur and Sarkod in 1716. Jai Singh's Deputy Ruprai dhaibhai could not meet the situation successfully. He requested Kirat Singh, Commander of the Mewar forces for help but the latter sent a siropao to the Maratha Commander Santoji. Though Jai Singh wrote strongly to Maharana Sangram Singh to send his troops and he himself managed to send contingent in spite of his being occupied with Churaman Jat etc. yet the Marathas could not be checked from pouring into Malwa like "swarms of ants and locusts" and committing plunder and devastation. On complaint of Vazir Abdullah Khan against S. Jai Singh the Emperor Farrukhshiyar appointed Muhammad Amin Khan, second Bakhshi, as subedar of Malwa in 1717. But neither Amin Khan nor his successor Nizam-ul-Mulk could cope with the situation in Malwa. At last a treaty was concluded in 1718 and Sahu was recognised as Chhatrapati who, in order to clear off his debts, allowed Peshwa Bajirao to use Malwa as his sporting ground.

When the Nizam met a defeat in the battle of Sakarkheda, the Emperor issued a farman in the name of S. Jai Singh granting Rs. 50,00,000/- for the expenses and deputing Sir Buland Khan and Saifuddin Khan to assist him in controlling the affairs in Malwa. But since the appointment of Amin Khan, S. Jai Singh was feeling estranged and apathetic to the interests of the Mughals, so he did not move from Amber In 1726, Maharana Sangram Singh also requested S. Jai Singh for help against the Maratha depredations in his country. Also there was unrest in Marwar, Kota was under fear and the efforts of Girdhar Bahadur, subedar of Malwa, had failed to check the advancing Marathas. S. Jai Singh, though not taking any active part, was giving his unofficial advice to all of them, who were oppressed.

Bajirao was still under apprehension of S. Jai Singh's action at any time. He, therefore, sent Dadurao to Jai Singh suggesting that the Chhatrapati was inclined to accept a jagir of Rs. 10,00,000/- a year from the Mughal Emperor for maintaining peace in Malwa. S. Jai Singh's first recommendation bore no fruit Consequently Dadurao marched into Malwa and gave a disastrous defeat to Girdhar Bahadur in the battle of Amjhera (near Dhar). Girdhar Bahadur lost his life in this battle.

Th Emperor then gave strong instructions to S. Jai Singh to send forces for the help of Bhawaniram, who was appointed in place of his father, Girdhar Bahadur. S. Jai Singh ordered his general Zorawar Singh to render necessary help but he sent a force of 700 men only. Bhawaniram could not control the situation and ultimately was removed from his post. S. Jai Singh was again appointed subedar of Malwa in 1729.

Sahu had authorised Udaji Panwar and Holkar to collect chauth from Malwa jointly. Maharana Sangram Singh was entreating Jai Singh again and again to drive the Marathas out. Though Jai Singh realised his limitations of weak finance, disatisfied soldiers, unmindful officers and half-hearted support from the public of Malwa, yet he dashed against Mandu and succeeded in occupying it in January, 1730. Still he realised at heart that a reconciliating move would be more proper than inviting frequent skirmishes. On the other hand Bajirao was also anxious to come to a settlement. He sent his envoys to S Jai Singh at Ujjain to move for negotiations. He wrote to Chimaji Ballal and Udaji Panwar also.

Sawai Jai Singh from his own side sent Dip Singh and Mansaram Purohit (of Udaipur) to assess the sincerety of Sahu and his Peshwa.

After much talk, Sahu demanded a jagir of Rs. 10,00,000/- a year in the name of his adopted son Kushal Singh and agreed to keep well-armed forces to serve under the Imperial subedar. He also promised to keep the Marathas out of Malwa and that his generals would not allow them to cross Narmada if Rs. 10,00,000/- were paid regularly until a jagir was granted.

Accordingly, the Maharaja again recommended to the Emperor to accede to these terms in consideration of the heavy expenses incurred every year. He wrote, "a large army and a lot of money would be required for crushing the Marathas. It would, therefore, be better if a jagir of Rs. 10,00,000/- was granted to Kushal Singh, son of Chhatrapati."

But the jehad party of the Emperor did not accept this recommendation, rather Jai Singh was asked to handover the charge of subedari of Malwa to Muhammad Khan Bangush on September 19, 1730. The local chiefs did not co-operate with Bangush. Ultimately, he was asked to relinquish charge again to Sawai Jai Singh on September 29, 1732. The Emperor sanctioned Rs. 20,00,000/- for preparations and the Imperial diwan was also ordered to co-operate with S. Jai Singh.

An agreement took place between Sawai Jai Singh and Maharana Sangram Singh of Udaipur in September, 1732 that out of 24,000 cavalery and 20,000 infantry, 9000 of each type would be maintained by the diwan and the rest by the Maharaja; peshkash and other revenue, realized from the suba, shall be divided between the diwan and the Maharaja as one share will go the diwan and two to the Maharaja. The income from the villages, taken on lease, shall also be divided in the same ratio (no. 916).

In February, 1733 Malhar Rao Holkar and Ranoji Scindia encircled the Imperial forces at Mandsor. The reinforcement from the Imperial side did not come in time. Sawai Jai Singh, being disappointed, paid Rs. 6,00,000/- in cash and 28 parganas for chauth to the Marathas. Then he came to Jaipur and continued to press for his policy of compromise. He had realised that the Marathas were a rising power and the Imperial government had become too weak to check their advances. The swooping Marathas had rushed over Rampura also and the Maharana was helpless. Conditions were not favourable in Marwar and Kota also. Therefore, Sawai Jai Singh convened a conference of the chiefs of Rajasthan at Hurda (no. 1497) on July 17, 1734 to find out ways and means to check the Marathas from coming beyond Narmada. The following terms were agreed—

1. That all were friends and none would help the enemy of one another.
2. All traitors would be turned out.
3. All sardars would assemble at Rampura with their forces after the rains. If any one was unable to do so on account of illness he would send his son or brother to represent him.
4. All would help each other in every important matter.

But nobody stuck to this pact. The chiefs gave themselves to their own hobbies and interest. In these circumstances, S. Jai Singh again tried to convince the Emperor and his vazir Qamaruddin Khan Chin Bahadur to accept Sahu's demand. But the jehadis regarded Jai Singh's advice as a mark of timidity and his leanings towards the Marathas. Qamaruddin Khan and Khan-i-dauran started with large armies for Malwa. S. Jai Singh also accompanied Khan-i-dauran in obedience to the Imperial orders. The Marathas, under Malhar Rao Holkar and Ranoji Scindia, encircled the Imperial army at Tonk – Toda. Jai Singh stood aloof. The Marathas advanced towards Kota, Bundi and Jaipur. Jai Singh represented Khan-i-dauran to make peace but the latter considered it below his dignity. The Marathas went as far as Sambhar and looted immense wealth from there. Khan-i-dauran suffered losses at Bundi also. At last he accepted S. Jai Singh' suggestions. A meeting was arranged on March 24, 1735 to discuss the terms of peace. Accordingly, Khan-i-dauran, the Mir Bakhshi, agreed to pay Rs. 22,00,000/- but the Emperor did not approve.

Thus, the whole plan to drive the Marathas out failed with disgrace and S. Jai Singh was held responsible for this failure.

Now, S. Jai Singh decided to appease and support Bajirao. He invited him to Jaipur and gave a warm welcome to his mother – Radhabai in June. 1735, when she was going on pilgrimage to Varanasi. S. Jai Singh also got orders issued by the Emperor to give her proper escort and not to charge any taxes from her (no. 73).

In spite of all this, the Emperor was anxious to see the Marathas driven out of Rajasthan and Malwa He sent Qamaruddin Khan, Abhai Singh of Marwar and Khan-i-dauran with forces in September, 1735. S. Jai Singh, being the subedar of Malwa also joined the Imperial army near Tonk–Toda, but reluctantly. The Imperial army suffered a crushing defeat at the hands of the Marathas in January, 1736.

After long negotiations Qamaruddin Khan confirmed the Emperor's decisions to allow the Marathas to collect levy up to 10,60,000/- a year from Bundi and Bhadawar etc. He also promised to hand over a sanad whenever the Maratha vakil wanted it. Bajirao smelt some deceit in these proposals. He, therefore, demanded full control of the Marathas over Malwa and the Deccan.

Muhammad Shah rejected these demands. He called Nizam-ul-Mulk to Delhi and entrusted him the task of driving the Peshwa out of Northern India. Ghazi-ud-din, Nizam's eldest son, was appointed subedar of Malwa in place of S. Jai Singh. He was, however, asked to offer all help at that juncture. Accordingly, S. Jai Singh sent a well armed force under his son, Ishwari Singh and Ayamal to serve under the Nizam. The Rajputs and the Jats fought bravely. But at last the Nizam was defeated. Peace had to be made at Doraisarai agreeing all terms in favour of the Marathas.

At last in 1740, Muhammad Shah realised that S. Jai Singh had given a wise counsel. The Peshwa was asked to submit an application for grant of the subedari of Malwa and to swear that he would bear all loyalty to the throne. Balaji Bajirao did all this accordingly. A farman was issued on July 4, 1741 conferring the Naib-subedari of Malwa on the Peshwa and subedari in favour of Prince Ahmad Shah. It was agreed on both sides.

Thus, S. Jai Singh's policy proved successful, "the Emperor could heave a sigh of relief and the Marathas felt obliged for the long coveted Imperial favour".[1]

Sawai Jai Singh closed his account of this world on September 23, 1743. Ishwari Singh sat on the gaddi and the Emperor Muhammad Shah recognised him. Ishwari Singh's younger brother Madho Singh contended for the throne with the help of his maternal uncle Maharana Jagat Singh (1734-1751) and the Marathas.

During Ahmad Shah Abdali's invasion 1747, Ishwari Singh had rendered all help to the Emperor. He himself went to Delhi with a strong army and took active part in the battle. But as his own country lay defenceless against the assaults from Kota and Mewar with the support of the Marathas he had to take a speedy retreat from Sirhind. The Imperial government, therefore, became somewhat indifferent in the matter of helping him in the family feud. Ishwari Singh, therefore, sought help from the Marathas. He sent his minister Keshavdas Khatri to Satara but he returned empty-handed as Madho Singh and the Maharana had purchased the Marathas at a higher cost. This ended with the tragic death of Ishwari Singh on December 12, 1750.

After Madho Singh's accession to the gaddi of Jaipur his supporters in the action opened their mouths. They began to give him trouble openly. Jayappa Scindia made a demand for one-third of his territory permanently. Malhar Rao Holkar was not satisfied with Rs. 5,00,00,000/- as succession fee. He did not feel contented even with the lease of pargana Tonk for 36 years, the income of which exceeded Rs. 3.62 lakhs per year. There is a number of documents bearing evidence to Madho Singh's relations and transactions with the Marathas (nos. 877, 960, 1004, 1114, 1310, 1351, 1352, 1354, 1355, 1356, 1434).

In order to get rid of the ever-increasing demands and turmoils of the Marathas, Madho Singh decided to adopt a policy to finish the influence of the Marathas in the centre. He, therefore, thought to win good-will of his kith and kin He made a friend with Bakhat Singh of Jodhpur. He also made Surajmal Jat of Bharatpur to dissuade Balram from bearing hostility with Safdarjang, the vazir. Then an important role was played by him in subsiding the disturbances created by Safdarjang Imad-ul-Mulk and Intzam Ali against the Emperor Ahmad Shah who won the support of Madho Singh by exchange of turbans. For his useful and bold suggestions and diplomatic skill shown in bringing the civil war at court to an end Madho Singh was rewarded by grant of the much coveted Ranthambhor fort (no. 26) to which the Marathas were quite opposed Apprehending an attack on his own territory by the Marathas under Raghunath Rao, Madho Singh had to leave Delhi abruptly, of course leaving a very good impression of his abilities at the Court. At home, he became busy in settling the family feud between Ram Singh and Vijai Singh of Jodhpur. He was called back by the vazir as Imad-ul-Mulk had encircled Deeg and Kumher with the help of Malhar Rao Holkar and Raghunath Rao who had to lift the siege when they heard that Madho Singh and the Imperial forces were arriving to help Surajmal. Now Malhar Rao thought of overturning the throne of Delhi and of appointing a new King. He, in his fury, plundered the camp of the Emperor's mother on her way from Delhi to Agra. Afterwards, Imad-ul-Mulk, the vazir, proceeded to Delhi and deposed the weak Emperor Ahmad Shah on June 1, 1754 and made Aziz-ud-Daullah seated on the throne as Alamgir II.

The new Emperor also maintained friendly relations with Madho Singh. He granted him a mansab of 7,000/- and 4,000 sawars, a cash reward of 1,50,00,000 dams[1] with the title of Raj Rajendra Sri Maharaja Sawai.

Surajmal had extended his territory up to Agra fort. The Marathas had left him by forcing to pay Rs. 60,00,000/. Imad ul-Mulk had also fallen in their hands as a helpless dependent. The Imperial treasury was quite empty now. In Rajasthan, Ram Singh[2] and Vijay Singh were fighting for Jodhpur, Jayappa Scindia was staying in Nagor in order to bring it to complete destruction.

Madho Singh was sorry for all these affairs. He once again tried to oust the Marathas from Rajasthan and Malwa in conjunction with Vijai Singh of Jodhpur, chiefs of Bundelkhand, Karoli, Rupnagar, Bundi and Shahpura etc. but the Imperial forces could not be available due to Imad-ul-Mulk's reluctance and also some of the chiefs did not respond. Antaji arrived with his 12,000 trained forces in time and the Marathas gave a tough defeat to the Rajputs at Chandol and Didwana (October 10, 1755). Due to the half-hearted and unwilling help from Marwar and Bikaner, Madho Singh was compelled to negotiate with the Marathas by promising to pay Rs. 12,00,000/- (no. 970).

Madho Singh was so much disgusted with the presence of the Marathas in Northern India that he made friends with Najeeb Khan Ruhela, a known opponent of the Marathas. He implored him to invite Ahmad Shah Abdali to free this part of the country from the Marathas. He sent his army to Ahmad Shah who gave a hopeful reply.

Ahmad Shah Abdali came on the Eastern bank of Sutluz (January 10, 1757) and captured Sirhind. Madho Singh advised Imad-ul-Mulk, a vazir, to first repulse the Marathas and then to oppose Abdali but his advice was not heard. Abdali also thwarted all hopes of Madho Singh by his oppressive and extorting activities in Delhi, cruel slaughter in Vrindavan and Mathura, siege of Agra fort and sack of Shuja-ud-daullah He showed little willingness to take arms against the Marathas.

Now, Madho Singh was left alone to contest with Raghunath Rao who had made a march against Jaipur. He besieged Barwara and put a demand for Rs. 50,00,000/- and the parganas of Tonk-Toda, Rampura, Hinglaj garh and the fort of Ranthambhor. The Jaipur diwan's entreaties to accept tribute as per previous settlement came to nil.

The Marathas advanced up to Thaneshwar and Sirhind, plundered and captured the towns and even pushed on to Lahore, Peshawar and Multan in 1759; Holkar invaded Mewar and defeated the Rana's army near Mandalgarh (August, 1759).

Madho Singh, being disappointed from all sides, joined hands with Najeeb Khan and made him write to Ahmad Shah Abdali to come to his help. The Shah sent a comforting reply that he would come after settling the affairs of Iran and Khurasan (Figs. 44-45).

Now, Madho Singh put his reliance in Abdali and hoped that he would come to drive the Marathas out of North India. In spite of all hurdles and cold response from Imad-ul-Mulk and others, Abdali gave a crushing defeat to the Marathas in the battle of Panipat (July 14, 1761) but he was interested more in gathering money than wiping out the Marathas from Northern Hindustan in the interest of the Rajputs.

Madho Singh continued to seek help from the other chiefs of Rajasthan and the Emperor but he was deprived of it. At last he breathed his last in 1767 leaving a smoother path for the Marathas 'to ravage and plunder the empire and the territories of the chiefs of Rajasthan freely.'

This is the story which tells us how the Rajput states came under the hegemony of the Marathas who were growing stronger day by day. Conditions went on worsening in Rajasthan. The chiefs were divided among themselves and fell in the dependence of the Marathas for their self-interests Though the Imperial Court still reposed hope in the Jaipur ruler that he could suppress the Marathas yet things were otherwise. S. Pratap Singh succumbed to the rising power and we find him agreeing to pay mamla to Madhav Rao Scindia who promised to help his Raj in every respect S. Pratap Singh, on his own part, agreed not to be led away by the opposite party (nos. 1121 and 1134).

Trouble increased against Jaipur when the Emperor appointed Madhavarao Scindia as vakil-e-mutlaq in December, 1784. The arrears were calculated as 3,40,00,000 against Jaipur. Scindia deputed three officers to collect this amount. These officers were so insolent and rash that many jagirdars and peasants rose against them and some two hundred men of Scindia's army were killed in their first assault. Then Madhavarao himself came to Dausa. His deputies, Raiji Patel and Ranekhan, advised him to reduce the amount of tribute and to withdraw the forces but, on the instigation of Pratap Singh Naruka of Macheri, he advanced towards Jaipur. The encounter became inevitable. Some 10,000 troops of the Rathores came from Jodhpur to help the Jaipur army Najaf Khan, Zulfikar Ali, Mansur Ali and Nawab Hamdani (no. 605), the Mughal generals also joined the Kachhawaha camp. The battle of Tunga was fought in 1843 V.S Sawai Pratap Singh came out victorious.[1]

At the same time, S. Pratap Singh established his friendship with Najaf Khan, the Mir Bakhshi. But they both came out to an agreement to pay Rs. 60,000/- to Maharaja Alijah Bahadur Scindia (no 1123).

Then comes a series of papers addressed to Jaipur durbar, his diwans and mutsaddis by Mahadji Scindia, Malhar Rao Holkar, Apaji Raghunath Rao, Ambaji Inglia, Amir Khan, Col. De Boigne and Perron etc. in connection with the largely increased amount of tribute or new terms of subordination. Such letters were often written in an authoritative tone and posed superiority of the writers. There is a memo no 1410 dated Baisakh sudi 11, 1850 V.S. (April 22, 1793) regarding the settlement made by Col. De Boigne and Bhau Bhaskar on first Baisakh sudi 7 regarding the fixation of mamla payable by Jaipur to the Marathas – saying that half of the revenue amount would be paid towards expenses of the army deputed in Marwar and half of the money collected as nazrana from sardars would also be given to the Marathas and the Maratha forces shall accompany the Jaipur army at the time of collections.

Those who played important role in negotiating the terms and tried to maintain prestige of the Maharaja were Bohra Raja Khushyaliram, Bohra Dinaram, Daulat Ram Haldia, Pahar Singh Khangarot, Rodaram Khawas and Mithalal Bakhshi etc. They kept themselves constantly in touch with the Maratha officials and tried their best to bring the mamla amount to a reasonable state and managed to pay the tribute on the promised dates. They also tried to keep as many parganas and villages out of the clutches of the Marathas as they could possibly do.

Negotiations with Tukoji Rao are witnessed in the following documents :-

1. The mutsaddis of Jaipur agreed to pay Rs. 1,00,000/- to Tukoji (no. 1420 dated May 16, 1791) on account of durbar kharch.

2. Tukoji wrote to S. Pratap Singh that Bapuji Holkar would be recalled and the possession of Rampura fort would be given as settled with Rodaram Khawas and Mithalal (no. 1475 dated August 6, 1791).

3. Tukoji further confirms, in his kharita (no. 847 dated June 13, 1792) sent with a tulsi-patra, that Khawas Rodaram would be granted leave after he had taken over charge of the fort of Rampura. Bakhshi Mithalal was staying there with the forces. The matter of the collection of mamla would be decided with him (the Bakhshi).

A new agreement took place between the new Alijah Bahadur, Daulatrao and Sawai Pratap Singh. The former directed the Maharaja to act according to the terms settled through Gyan Singh Chundawat, Hakim D'Silva, Raja Gopal Rao, Raghunath Rao and General DeBoigne at Shivapur. The terms were—

1. The Maharaja would pay Rs. 15,00,000/- as mamla.

2. The friends and foes of one would be regarded as friends and foes of the other.

3. The Maharaja would pay for the expenses made for maintaining the forces whenever required by him.

4. No interference would be made in the internal affairs of the State.

5. No change would be made in the terms already settled (no. 1055 dated September 10, 1794, Figs. 136-137).

It appears that Sawai Pratap Singh was against disunity among the chiefs of Northern India when he saw that even the Scindia (Daulat Rao) could not maintain his position to continue to help the Rajput chiefs. He wrote on Asadh sudi 1, 1857 V.S. to Bahadur Singh that alliance among themselves at that juncture was necessary to pressurise Daulat Rao who implored their help. He pleaded to bring the rulers of Kota, Bundi, Jodhpur and Udaipur together and even the British into their alliance if possible. If all were united it would not be impossible to conquer the whole kingdom (no. 874).

An undated document no. 1401 contains an agreement between the Maharaja of Jaipur and the Marathas as under –

1. If the Rathores gave up Sambhar, Jaipur would also do the same.

2. The Maharaja would give Hindaun in order to clear the accounts of Ambaji Inglia.

3. Claim for Kama Bhusawar and other parganas would also be given up.

The Maharaja of Jaipur had appointed his vakil at Scindia's court to deal with the European generals of the Maratha army. The name of Rai Ratanlal is conspicuous. It was the duty of a vakil to keep the Maharaja well-informed about the changes that took place in the Maratha administration. In no. 960 dated December 30, 1795, it is informed to the Maharaja that Col. De Boigne had gone to Lucknow and Imam Bakhsh had taken over full charge of the pargana (Bankapur).

As usual, sometimes false news and rumours were floated about the rulers in the opposite circles, but doubts were removed through the vakils and representatives Gulab Rao, a Maratha official informed Rai Ratanlal that Rajaram had explained all the matters and hence no interference would be made in the Maharaja's territory (no. 1343 dated April 5, 1798).

Daulat Rao Scindia himself assured Sawai Pratap Singh that there would be no invasion on his country as the mamla dues settled throuh Col. Perron, who was appointed in place of Gen DeBoigne, had been received (no. 993, June 7, 1798).

Assurance was given through Vaman Khanderao also in his letter (no. 963) addressed to Khawas Rodaram and Bohra Dinaram promising to act according to their wishes. Rao Ambaji Inglia promised that he would not side with Lakhwa against the Maharaja and would not help Kota also. Raja Kamalnayan, a representative of Scindia, informed Raichand Diwan that Rao Kushal Singh and Bohra Dinaram could not arrive at the appropriate time so no settlement could be made for allotment of Kama and Khori (no. 560, undated). Later, Ratanlal informed Bhawanidas that General Sahib had accepted the terms as desired by the Maharaja (no. 594, undated).

It appears that the Marathas were suspicious about the Jaipur authorities in respect of their policy towards them. Jaswant Rao wrote in his kharita (no. 639, undated) that the Maharaja affirmed friendship through his vakil on one hand and was corresponding with his enemies on the other. In these circumstances the Marathas became hard in their dealings so much so that the Maharaja ran to seek help of the imperialists, Najaf Khan, and his associates against Holkar. Nawab Afrasiyab Khan, a leiutenant of Najaf Khan, assured Sawai Pratap Singh to help him in case Holkar created disturbances in Tonk and Rampura (no. 144). He was also hopeful that these parganas would come in the possession of the Maharaja very soon (no. 304). The Jaipur authorities were so much engrossed with the terror of Holkar that they rejoiced at Tukoji Rao's defeat at the hands of Aitmad-ud-daullah. The Nizam acknowledged their congratulations.

The Scindia had appointed Gulab Rao for collecting mamla from Jaipur for which General Sahib was duly authorised (no. 579 undated).

The European officers of the Maratha camp had begun to use their influence in matters of administration and in making recommendations for appointments. An officer informed Bakhshi Mithalal that he found complete disorder at Jaipur and hence recommended Capt. Istrak's appointment there (no. 1470).

But Bajirao appears to be friendly with Maharaja Sawai Pratap Singh. He wrote to Raghunath Rao and Nilkanth that Rs. 5,00,000/- were to be charged in the case of Aniruddh Singh and Rs. 5,00,000/- for mamla of Sawai Jaipur for the previous year. This matter was to be finally decided after the bond executed for the purpose was returned to the Maharaja (no. 1093, undated).

The foreign generals of the Marathas had begun to consider themselves so powerful that they intervened even in the domestic matters also of the rulers. In no. 1051 (undated) the Maharaja of Jaipur Sawai Pratap Singh was requested by the General to send his Maharani Rathore ji to Jodhpur for which her father the Jodhpur ruler, had complained.

Inwardly, the Maharaja was not pleased with the Marathas and their foreign generals. His ministers were secretly negotiating with the Marathas against the foreigners. Accordingly, secret messages were exchanged through messengers. Rao Raja Khande Rao wrote to Bohra Dinaram that Dada Sahib would keep his promise as given to Mangiram, an envoy of the State (no. 961) The Bohra, on his part, confirmed Khande Rao's message in his letter to Raiji Patel (no. 961 A).

On the other hand, the Maharaja had his own men who had won some of Holkar's servants on their side. One of the Holkar's employees wrote to the Maharaja that though he was in Holkar's service yet had great regards for the Maharaja (no. 581).

It appears that S. Pratap Singh had secured goodwill of Col. DeBoigne to some extent who became inclined to help him. The Colonel wrote to Apaji Khanderao that the disturbances created by him in Shekhawati were not proper and that Lakhwa was being sent there (no. 351).

Gusain Anupgiri Himmat Bahadur also agreed to act in the interest of the Maharaja as he wrote to Shambhu Singh Gogawat in no. 607.

Bakhshi-ul-Mulk Najaf Quli Khan also became a friend of S. Pratap Singh and assured that the pargana of Kotputli would be handed over to the mutsaddis of the Maharaja very soon (no. 346, undated). He also assured to have no relations with Rao Raja Pratap Singh of Macheri and that he had settled terms with Raja Himmat Bahadur according to the wishes of the Bakhshi (Mithalal).

Shamsham Jang, an employee of Holkar, requested for service in Jaipur state (no. 597 of A.D. 1800).

Col. Perron was appointed in place of Col. De Boigne. Daulat Rao Scindia wrote that the messages conveyed by him were to be regarded as his (no. 532 of November 25, 1802).

Daulat Rao instructed S. Pratap Singh to pay the tribute of Salwad to Holkar as usual.

There are some other documents relating to S. Pratap Singh's dealings with Marathas in the form of agreements and letters exchanged between them.

It appears that relations between Sawai Pratap Singh and Mahadji Scindia became cordial at one stage. Shivaji Vithal Rao wrote to the Maharaja in his letter dated Paush sudi 7, 1847 (January 11, 1791) that Madhavrao Scindia was a great sardar and the Maharaja was the greatest Raja of Hindustan (no. 848).

Abaji (Apaji) Raghunath Rao wrote to Sawai Pratap Singh on January 13, 1791 that his message received through Lakshman Rao was communicated to Alijah Bahadur All misunderstandings had been removed and friendship established on oath from both sides (no. 851). On the same day, Madhav Rao himself confirmed friendship and expressed his willingness to help the Maharaja (no. 950).

Rayaji Patel also wrote on the same day about the removal of his misunderstandings and establishing friendship on both sides (no. 969).

An agreement took place on Magh sudi 5, 1847 V.S. (February 8, 1791) at Phulya, pargana Shahpura, suba Ajmer through Pahar Singh and Rodaram Khawas (with the Marathas) that the confiscated parganas would be returned; the Maharaja would himself manage the affairs of his country; friends and foes of one party would be the same of the other; no heed would be paid to the false reports against the Maharaja; forces would be sent to help the Maharaja on payment (no. 1409).

Another agreement was concluded between Sawai Pratap Singh and Ambaji Ingle that the expenses incurred on army called for help would be paid, territories outside the State would be managed in consultation with Ambaji, the Maharaja would try to expel Lakhwa from his (Maharaja's) territory and friendship would be maintained by both the parties (no 964, dated May 8, 1799).

At last, Col. Perron gave up service of the Marathas and joined British army. Krishnaji of Rampura fort informed his masters that so long as the Colonel stayed there, he governed Tonk but after his departure the Jaipur forces turned the men out of the fort (no. 1100, Kartik sudi 9, 1860 V.S.).

Contact with the British*

S. Pratap Singh strived hard throughout his life to meet the Maratha domination by paying large sums of mamla and by signing ignominious treaties sometimes with Scindia and sometimes with the Holkar. These two chiefs also were rivals in trying to establish superiority and were always seeking chances to fleece the chiefs of Rajasthan. The Maharaja now and then sought help from the generals of the weak and unfortunate Emperor Shah Alam also. During his last days S. Pratap Singh realised that Col. Perron had established a controlling influence over the Rajput chiefs and governed their policies in their mutual dealings and even in domestic communications.

At the same time, he was experiencing a stinging pain under the humiliating tutelage of the Scindia and Col. Perron. Therefore, he pleaded to his kinsmen and the other chiefs to unite and get rid of the vulgar dominators.

Document numbers 125, 301, 302, 306, 310, 312, 317, 318 and 589 of M.S. Pratap Singh's period are related to the deposed Nawab of Avadh, Vazir Ali, his repose in Jaipur, pressure of the British authorities on the Maharaja to surrender him and ultimately his departure as a captive of the British. From these documents it will appear that S. Pratap Singh had taken utmost care in taking assurance regarding the safety of the Nawab's life. Ultimately the British had to accept the conditions laid down by the Maharaja and Vazir Ali was reluctantly handed over to them only after they had released official agreement for not taking his life and not to put him under chains.

"Vazir Ali, the deposed Nawab of Oudh, murdered G.F. Cherry—the British Resident at Banaras and four other Englishmen on 14th January, 1799. Fearing strong reprisals by the British Government, he left Banaras to seek an asylum by some powerful Indian Potentate. After initial disappointments at many places, he finally thought of going to Jaipur where he arrived on 23rd June, 1799. Maharaja Pratap Singh who had given him sharan (asylum) deputed two harkaras (courtiers) with him to superintend his conduct. He was lodged in the garden house of Nathmal Johri, a rich jeweller of Jaipur city.

Soon after Vazir Ali's arrival at Jaipur had been confirmed, Col. Collins, the British Resident at Scindia's court, General Perron, the French commander of Scindia's forces and other Maratha generals wrote to Maharaja Pratap Singh not to allow Vazir Ali to escape but to keep him under strict surveillance. The Maharaja was in a great fix. After consulting his ministers he decided to ask Vazir Ali to retire to Amber which he refused. In the meantime, British and Maratha pressure on the Maharaja increased considerably This made the problem still more serious and when Vazir Ali showed his reluctance to leave Jaipur, the Maharaja peremptorily ordered him to leave the city within two days. Vazir Ali now realised the seriousness and gravity of the situation and agreed to the proposal. Thus, after 3 months and 20 days' stay at Jaipur, Vazir Ali was finally taken to Amber. At about 9 o'clock in the night of 13th October, 1799, Dina Ram Bohra, one of Maharaja Pratap Singh's confident ministers, met Vazir Ali with a small contingent of 50 soldiers and succeeded in persuading him to sit in a palanquin which reached Amber a little after one o'clock in the morning of 14th October, 1799. He was lodged there in Rajawaton ki haveli (mansion).

Three weeks after Vazir Ali's arrival at Amber, Col. Collins had also reached Jaipur on 5th November, 1799. He was lodged there in Natani ka Bagh. During the period of his stay at Jaipur, he met the Maharaja and his ministers a number of times. In his talks he pressed the Maharaja to surrender the assassin, failing which he would have to incur the displeasure of the British Government. The Maharaja was in a great dilemma and was reluctant to surrender the culprit unconditionally. However, after prolonged negotiations, it was agreed upon that the assassin would be surrendered if his life was spared and he was not put in chains. When Collins accepted these terms, Vazir Ali was brought back to Jaipur on 24th November, 1799 and apprised of the terms of his surrender. Naturally, he felt greatly offended and, according to Jaipur State records, tried to meet the Maharaja on the second day of his arrival, that is, on Margshirsh Budi 13, Samvat 1856 (Monday the 25th November, 1799). He came in a palki and reached the palace five gharis after sunset. He waited for one ghari outside the Deorhi of rasowada. Then he proceeded in the palki up to the aukhadkhana. Thereafter, he went on foot to Saras Mandir through the surang of aukhadkhana. He was accompanied by Hakeem Xaviour D' Silva and Bohra Dina Ram. He waited for six gharis more. The document is silent on further details. Obviously, he failed to meet the Maharaja.

In the meantime, plans were chalked out to seize and surrender the assassin to Col

Collins. Ultimately, they succeeded on Sunday, the 1st December, 1799 and on the next day, Vazir Ali was taken to Collins' camp unarmed and unattended by any of his own people. He was immediately put under strict confinement and a few hours later was conveyed to the Camp at Kanota. Under orders from the Maharaja, Bohra Dina Ram was allowed to meet him in the camp in the presence of Capt. Parson. Vazir Ali was shocked and distressed by the presence of the Bohra who had lately betrayed him. Hakeem Xavier accompanied, under the Maharaja's orders, Collins' contingent and Vazir Ali up to Agra which place was reached on the morning of 13th December, 1799."[1]

Lord Wellesley, in such a state of affairs, sounded S. Pratap Singh through his vakil at Calcutta and also sent a draft of the proposed engagements. But the Maharaja wanted him to come forward with his unfolded plans and clear explanations of the ambiguous terms used in the draft as he had already experienced at the pinch of his heart the astute dealings of the British in the case of Vazir Ali. Before the draft proposals could reach Jaipur, Sawai Pratap Singh expired on August 1, 1803 and his son Jagat Singh became the Maharaja of Jaipur.

Lord Wellesley entrusted the work of negotiating with Rajput chiefs to Lord Lake, Commander-in-Chief. The Rajputs were initially hesitating to accept the British proposals for fear of the Scindia and the Holkar. The death of S. Pratap Singh and that of Bhim Singh of Jodhpur also became cause of delay. Jagat Singh became busy in the preparation for marriage with Krishna Kumari, a princess of Udaipur. He had sent his troops for the help of the Maharana and his envoys to win some of the sardars to his side especially the Chundawats of Deogarh (nos. 1078 to 1081).

In the meanwhile the Scindia had also become a friend of the British and created a situation in which Sawai Jagat Singh felt distressed and deserted. He tried through Lord Lake (no. 1681) to make Scindia agreeable to help him in arranging his marriage with the Mewar princess. Maharaja Man Singh of Jodhpur also sought help from the British and became a friend of Amir Khan. Consequently, the Resident of Tonk told the Jaipur vakil that the British would not interfere in the family disputes of the rulers. This flat refusal made Jagat Singh and Man Singh to conclude an agreement in April, 1806 that neither Jagat Singh nor Man Singh would marry the Rana's daughter and the Rana would not give the princess' hand to any other Raja without the consent of the both. This friendship between Jaipur and Jodhpur was further cemented by the marriage of Man Singh with Jagat Singh's sister and that of Jagat Singh with Man Singh's daughter (no. 1116). But soon after, some interested people created troubles and made both the rulers confront each other.

The Jaipur ruler (Jagat Singh) was hesitating to sign a treaty with the British on account of their ill behaviour with the rulers and people of smaller states. Marquis of Hastings has written in his private journal (Vol. I, pp. 47-48), "in our treaties with them, we recognize them as independent sovereigns, then we send a Resident to their courts. Instead of acting in the character of an ambassador he assumes the function of a dictator, interferes in their private concern, countenances their refractory subjects against them and makes the most ostentatious exhibition of the exercise of authority."

The Jaipur ministers were shrewd enough to weigh the pros and cons of bartering away their freedom for their ambiguous proposals drafted by the astute English statesmen.

The Holkar took a chance to exploit these hesitations of the Jaipur Court. Scindia also sent a message through his vakil to S. Jagat Singh (November 18, 1803) warning him against the impending damage to the nation and Hindu religion at the hands of crafty English tradesmen (no. 1048) The Jaipur ministers favoured these views but afterwards it became clear that the underlying mission of the Marathas was to realise the outstanding mamla dues and not to help the Maharaja in attaining his aims. Jagat Singh and his ministers became alert and sent Bakhshi Mithalal and Dr. Xaviour D' Silva to meet Gen. Lake. After much discussion a treaty of alliance was concluded on December 12, 1803 on the basis of the draft which was sent to S. Pratap Singh.

Negotiations of the British with the Holkar failed and a war broke out in April, 1804 The British army was fighting under Gen. Manson and he expected Jaipur forces to check Holkar's advance through Kota and his own territory. But due to lack of clear directions from Maj. Gen. Jones, who was consulted by the Maharaja, proper action could not be taken. As usual to their nature, the British alleged that the Maharaja did not help them in the time of need and thus violated the fourth condition of the treaty. In spite of Lord Lake's later admission that the charge was not true and the Maharaja's explicit clarification of the situation, the treaty of alliance with Jaipur was dissolved through Sir George Barlow's letter of January 3, 1806 at the instance of the new Governor General Lord Cornwallis.

This conduct of the British Government towards Jaipur State was universally condemned for their violation of moral and political decency.

Jagat Singh had not totally given up his desire for marrying the Udaipur princess. He prepared for war against Jodhpur and added Mewati Pathans and even Amir Khan to his side. Man Singh of Jodhpur also prepared for a fight. They both sought help from the British, the Holkar and even from the Rao Raja of Macheri, who was under the protection of the British at that time, but they all evaded the encounter on one pretext or the other. Holkar rather advised S. Jagat Singh through his messenger not to involve in the fatal action of war. The Resident at Delhi also abstained from offering any sort of help in the mutual feuds. On this the Jaipur Maharaja told Holkar not to interfere in his affairs and that he should leave them (Jaipur and Jodhpur) to settle their differences in their own way. He offered conditional bills of exchange for Rs. Ten lakhs to be paid to Holkar when his forces had reached Kota on their way to the Deccan (nos. 870 and 1338). Thus, he got rid of Holkar for some time and some Rathores of Jodhpur also joined him under Sawai Singh of Pokharan and Dhonkal Singh, a claimant to the gaddi of Jodhpur. Man Singh now became isolated and detached. He tried to establish contacts with the British but the latter declined to take any side for their notions of neutrality.

S. Jagat Singh marched through Jodhpur territory with Dhonkal Singh etc., and laid a seige to the capital. At this time, Amir Khan did not miss the opportunity of laying waste the suburbs of Jodhpur. This created disgust and fury among the Rathores and they deserted Jagat Singh in spite of all his efforts to quell them. Amir Khan, cunning as he was, left Jagat Singh in the lurch after making much of the chance. He began to make incursions on Jaipur State. Though the Jaipur forces, under Sheo Lal, defeated Amir Khan near Kishangarh (August 3, 1807), yet the Maharaja could not make much of it and resumed his favourite plan of marrying the Udaipur princess by continuing the siege of Jodhpur. Here, on this side, Amir Khan increased his pressure on Jaipur and created a very miserable situation in the vicinity of the capital. Jagat Singh had to leave Jodhpur for Jaipur.

It appears that influential British officers had their contacts with the rich seths and bankers through whom the rulers of states, their vakils and other people made their approach to them. Maharaja Jagat Singh made a request to the British Resident at Delhi through Lala Harsukhrai, a rich banker of Delhi (no. 940). The Maharaja also tried to make use of the good offices of Raja Abhai Singh of Khetri, Seth Sanwaldas, Suratram and Mansaram etc., through Rai Hardayal and Rai Ratanlal but all these efforts bore no fruits.

At this very time Daulat Rao Scindia sent his forces under Bapuji Shinde who encircled the town of Tordi. Jagat Singh tried to regain friendship with Amir Khan by sending his trusted ministers. He sought help from Holkar also but he could not come to terms due to the disturbances in his own troops. Amir Khan also displayed his deceitful character and did not come. Bapuji Shinde continued to increase his demands day by day. He claimed expenses incurred on his forces in addition to the original amount of Rs. 40,00,000/- already settled. The Maharaja requested through his vakil to the British to protect Jaipur from the Marathas but they too did not accede to it. The Maharaja was now pressed to make an agreement with the Scindia and to arrange a part payment of his demands (nos. 918*, 925, 926, 931, 943, 946 and 949).

At last the truth dawned upon the rulers of Jaipur and Jodhpur that all trouble had arisen on account of their dissensions which had cropped out of their desire to marry the Udaipur princess. Now their understanding prevailed to make "a treaty of strict friendship and alliance" (no. 638). The British Resident Mr. Seton was also requested to witness and sign the treaty but he refused.

All this was against the wishes of Amir Khan, who was after tightening his hold on Udaipur. He 'pursuaded the Maharana and succeeded in securing the death of Krishna Kumari.' By this, though not of Jagat Singh, he could gain friendship of Man Singh of Jodhpur who began to regard him like "second Jalandharnath".[1] He continued to intimidate the Jaipur ruler and also exacted large sums by blackmailing. At last an agreement took place in 1811 by which Amir Khan was to be paid Rs. 10,00,000/- in addition to Rs. 6,00,000/- which was to be paid to his principal officer Muhammad Shah Khan out of the arrears which was to be realised from Shekhawati (nos. 299, 332, 333, 348, 530, 544, 545, 547 and 553).

At last Jagat Singh proposed some terms to Charles Metcalfe for a treaty of alliance with the British Company. Metcalfe acknowledges receipt of his letters and makes a mention of the revolt of Bikaner forces who had joined the Raja of Khetri in the act of plundering the neighbouring territories including the British (no. 167).

Sir Charles Metcalfe realized the moral aspect of Jaipur's demand for help and ultimately a treaty of alliance was concluded on April 2, 1818. The Text of the treaty is as below (no. 628) :-

Treaty between the Honourable East India Company and Maharajah Sewaee Juggut Singh Bahadoor, Rajah of Jyepoor concluded by Mr. Charles Theophilus Metcalfe, on the part of the Honourable Company in virtue of full powers granted by His Excellency the Most Noble the Marquis of Hastings, K.G., Governor General & Ca. and by Thakoor Rawul Byree Sal Nattawut on the part of Raj Rajindar Sree Maharajah Dheeraj Sewaee Juggut Singh Bahadoor, according to full powers given by the Rajah.

Article 1 : There shall be perpetual friendship, alliance, and unity of interest, between the Honourable Company and Maharajah Juggut Singh, and his heirs and successors, and friends and enemies of one party shall be the friends and enemies of both parties.

2. The British Government engages to prottect the territory of Jyepoor and to expel the enemies of that principality.

3. Maharajah Sewaee Juggut Singh, and his heirs and successors, will act in Subordinate Co-operation with the British Government, and acknowledge its supremacy, and will not have any connection with other Chiefs and States.

4. The Maharajah and his heirs and successors will not enter into negotiation with any Chief or State without knowledge and sanction of the British Government, but the usual amicable correspondence with friends and relations shall continue.

5. The Maharajah and his heirs and successors, will not commit aggression on any one. If it happens that any dispute arises with any one, it shall be submitted to the arbitration and award of the British Government.

6. Tribute shall be paid, in perpetuity, by the principality of Jyepoor to the British

*The document reads M.S. Pratap Singh as the recipient of this receipt. M.S. Pratap Singh had died in 1860 V.S. It might be an error of the office of Scindia to mention the deceased king's name.

This treaty was ratified by H.E. the Governor General in camp near Toolsepore, on the 15th April, 1818.

J. Adam
Secretary to the Governor General.

It will be observed that this treaty was very much different from the one drafted in 1803 in the time of M.S. Pratap Singh. In place of equality and friendship the enhanced power and prestige of the Company clearly reflects into it.

However, immediately after the Treaty was signed Sir David Ochterlony visited Jaipur and Maharaja Jagat Singh held a durbar on 17.6.1818 in his presence which was attended by all the important thakurs and jagirdars of the State. The following decisions were taken and all those present there signed the paper at the instance of the Maharaja—

1. The thakurs should give up their possessions over the additional khalsa lands which they had seized during the period of disturbance by means of exortion and malpractices.

2. None of them should support or give shelter to the thieves and dacoits.

3. All possible help and facilities should be given to the traders and merchants and the losses sustained by them at the hands of robbers in their territory should be made good.

4. The thakurs should remain loyal and faithful to the Maharaja.

5. Their (thakurs') relatives and servants, who enjoyed lands through separate patta, should render service separately.

6. Rahdari and merchantile duties shall be realised by the State and not by jagirdars.

7 No tyranny or oppression would be exercised on the subjects or raiyats by the jagirdars.

M.S. Jagat Singh breathed his last in December, 1818 and a great disorder prevailed in the Royal household and the State until a posthumous son was born to Bhattianiji, his widow, on April 20, 1819 and the British Resident took over the reins of the State to help the Queen mother in the administration.

Instantly payment of Rs. 2,00,000/- was made, towards the amount of Rs. 4,00,000/-, as first instalment of the tribute on April 24, 1819 (no. 343).

Much joy and jubilance prevailed in the house of Jaipur on the birth of the Maharaja. Bakhshi Balmukund congratulated Maji Sahiba after hearing the happy news (no. 998).

The Governor General sent tika dastur for the Maharaja through Mr. Ferguson and others with a kharita (no. 528 dated October 8, 1819).

Sir David Ocherlony again visited Jaipur and was received honourably by all the nobles who gathered to greet him (no. 611); all the Kachhawahas and other nobles promised in his presence to fulfill all the conditions in their arzi (no 287).

Soon after Ochterlony returned, factional rivalries started in the Jaipur court which were created by the British Resident. He tried to create differences between the two Majis Rathoreji and Bhattianiji. Rathoreji was senior but the Bhattianiji became regent being the mother of the Maharaja. In spite of the British efforts to estrange them with one another both the majis were wise enough to silence him by saying that as a well-wisher he should have given an advice to cement the union which subsisted between them. Maji Rathoreji was of a more exalted rank and Bhattianiji expressed that she and her son would always obey her. Rawal Bairisal of Samod was appointed as Prime Minister and Ochterlony was informed that all other appointments would be made with his (Rawal's) advice.

David Ochterlony though felt it yet swallowed this bypass and discussed the policy and plan of his administration with the Rawal. He assured to repose his confidence in the Prime Minister but invariably pursued his own intention to get a British Agent appointed at Jaipur. Ultimately, it was approved by the Governor General and Captain J. Stewart was appointed Political Agent at Jaipur in 1821.

The first report which the Political Agent submitted to the Governor General was that the revenue income of the State had come down from Rs. 34,00,000/- to 22,00,000/- or 23,00,000/- only, and so it had become difficult to realize the settled amount of tribute. He, therefore, proposed that he should have his hand in the revenue affairs. The Queen mother proposed to place Jhuntharam and Amarchand Diwans as incharge of the Revenue department. The Governor General disagreed with the Maji because Stewart did not like it and expressed his doubts about the capacity of Rawal Bairisal also. The Revenue department was, therefore, entrusted to Capt J. Stewart and Rawal Bairisal jointly. The British Agent now tried to interfere in the expenditure side also. But the Regent mother felt it derogatory to her sovereignty. Thence, a dislike for the Queen mother was created in Stewart's mind and he began to threaten the Rawal and Jhuntharam that he would report the matter to the Governor General and seek his sanction for interference in the matters of expenditure also. The Governor General gave his acceptance to the dual interference in matters of revenue and expenditure in order to increase the revenue income and more to ascertain the regular payment of the stipulated amount of tribute.

Stewart continued to pursue his policy of interference in the internal administration. He made Rawalji realise that the real power would be in the hands of the Agent and not the Maji. Consequently, he (Rawalji) began to show signs of indifference towards Maji. The gulf grew wider and wider due to Stewart's fanning the fire now and then. The Rawal now began to give all important informations to the Agent regularly. He also began to complain that his plans for making reforms in the administration were thwarted by the Maji by instigating her favourites. The Rawal went even to the extreme of suggesting that Regency should be withdrawn from the Maji but Capt. Stewart did not agree to it.

Now, there were two factions at the Jaipur Court who were studiously active for gaining power and supremacy—the Maji on one side and the Rawal supported by the Agent on the other. The Rawal made a demand to dismiss some of the trusted supporters of the Maji. The Resident did not approve this demand. The Queen mother on the other hand expressed her intention to appoint a new minister rather than ousting the faithful servants. The Resident (at Delhi) could not challenge Maji's right to appoint a minister but he suggested to refer the matter to the Governor General. The Maji was very intelligent to well imagine that the Governor General would not approve her proposal without Stewart's recommendation. She, therefore, bypassed him and made a direct working agreement with the Rawal, who, in turn, gave up his demand to remove Maji's trusted servants. Stewart now felt discomfited at this political defeat but he did not give up pursuance to show the Regent Queen down.

Sir David Ochterlony visited Jaipur again in February, 1823 and Stewart filled his ears with complaints against Maji. The Resident passed very adverse remarks against the Regent mother and strongly expressed the necessity of transfering all powers of Government to the Rawal who should not be disturbed by her interferences.

As soon as Ochterlony left Jaipur, the Regent mother asserted her authority and appointed Thakur Megh Singh (of Diggi) as minister removing Bairisal from the post, who shut himself in his house at Jaipur. But Stewart continued to assure him to come to his rescue. Accordingly, he wrote to the Governor General about all these changes. He was advised once again to pursue the Regent to remove her bad advisors and to appoint Bairisal as minister with full powers. Maji again adopted her old device to contact with Bairisal through a deputation and an understanding was arrived at according to which he was to be invested with full powers and would not insist on other conditions. Accordingly, a siropao of Mukhtari was given to him in a durbar (no. 1674).

The Maji continued to complain against Rawal's maladministration and the disturbances which had arisen at Jaipur (no. 832). Maji's cases were represented before the Governor General by Ratanlal vakil. David Ochterlony was again sent to Jaipur for making enquiries (no. 735). Capt. Stewart's term also ended and Major Raper was appointed in his place.

It was due to the Rawal's sloth and gross inadvertance that the soldiers were not paid their salaries for months together. The battalions in Toravati came to Jaipur for demanding their salaries and arrears. They gathered at the Residency and at the gates of the palace also. Major Raper called a body of troops. He presumed that the revolt was due to Maji's instigations but Ochterlony did not believe it.

It came to light that Rawal Bairisal had made the treasury empty and there were no funds with the Government. His removal was, therefore, contemplated. Major Raper continued to plead his cause and threatened that acting against the British power might cause a great loss to the minor Raja and his mother. At first Maji was not prepared to accept Bairisal's continuance but afterwards agreed to consider him as a nominal Mukhtar till other arrangements were made by mutual consultation among the Resident, Political Agent and herself. She also insisted on a thorough auditing of the accounts of his time. The Rawal gave in writing that he and his brother Lakshman Singh of Chomu would be responsible for the refund of such amounts as would be assessed against them. He begged Raper for offering safety for his life and property. Raper granted all this to him without consulting Ochterlony who was then present at Jaipur. This widened the gulf between the two British officers. Bairisal's request for appointing a vakil with the Political Agent was also rejected (no. 781). Raper always sent false reports and distorted accounts to the higher authorities in order to damage the prestige of the Queen mother. He made scandalous reports about her so-called cruelties and execution of irregular orders conveyed through her favourite Rupa badaran and others. Plainly speaking, the Queen mother was not even aware of all such charges which were piled against her. It was considered that with the change of the minister, the Agent should also be replaced by another more tactful and tolerant person.

Major Raper was due to retire in 1825. The Queen mother asked him to recall Jhuntharam who was exiled two years ago in order to give the Rawal a free hand in administration. However, on the eve of his departure Raper recommended that the Sanghi might be recalled for making the administration more healthy. Sir Charles Metcalfe, the new Resident at Delhi, agreed to this proposal and issued orders. Captain Low was the Political Agent then. Bairisal now felt nervous at the return of Jhuntharam.

Like his predecessor Captain Low also adopted the policy of opposing the Regent mother. He attempted to win over the thakurs and jagirdars of the State on his side.

The Maharaja had now become seventeen years old. He came out of the palace and held a durbar attended by all the nobles and chiefs, but the Rawal and his followers did not attend in spite of formal invitation.

The British Government adopted the policy of taking guarantee of thakurs and jagirdars against whom the State revenue was outstanding. This dwindled the sources of income of the State and the arrears against the jagirdars rose high. The very springs of development and progress thus became quail. In August, 1827 a warning from the British Government was received that all the arrears of tribute should be paid off by the State within a specified period. If it was not done some parganas of khalsa would be attached. This created great apprehension in the minds of all for and against parties. No one liked that any part of the state be siezed. They all combined and raised loans hastily to pay off fourteen hundis for Rs. 8,00,000/- on October 7, 1827. Maji, however, complained regarding the heavy amount of tribute which was much more than that realised from other states. She proposed that it should be reduced to Rs. 4,00,000/-. On the other hand, Capt. Low, the Agent, remarked that improper government was responsible for this trouble as Rs. 8,00,000/- could be easily paid if the revenue and expenditure were competently controlled.

In her disappointment the Maji Sahiba proposed the appointment of Jhuntharam as Prime Minister as he alone was capable enough to mend the matters and to pay the tribute regularly. The Governor General and the Resident gave permission to the appointment of Jhuntharam as Prime Minister, but Capt. Low opposed this arrangement. The higher authorities advised him not to exert unnecessary influence in matters of the ruler and the people of Jaipur. This was done with the good hopes that the tribute would be paid regularly in future and it would not fall into arrears.

The thakurs and jagirdars felt dejected because they had lost their chances of having support of the Political Agent for their right or wrong actions. The British Agent also realised that henceforward his influence in the internal administration of Jaipur would be diminished by far. He, therefore, withdrew his practical support to the State.

The Rawal's influence was now very much reduced. It was a practice that half of one years income of a jagir was realised by the State at the time of a real son's accession to it. In case of an adopted son the amount used to be double i.e. the full income of one year together with some nazrana. Thakur Kishan Singh of Chomu expired. His adopted son Lakshman Singh succeeded him (no. 826). The amount of matmi was to be realised by the State and the payment of Rs. 80,000/- was agreed by Jhuntharam to be realised in instalments (no. 828). Bairisal recommended his case to liquidate the amount of nazrana which was to be charged in addition to the matmi amount because he was an adopted son (693).

During the period of disturbances, Amir Khan of Tonk had usurped some villages of Jaipur. It was reported to the Agent but he declined to take any action in the matter under the pretext of the terms of Treaty (no. 711).

The district of Bamaur had been in the possession of Rao Raja of Uniara since long. Amir Khan claimed this district for himself and seized the lands by force but the Rao could retain the fortresses and collected rent from there. Amir Khan sought intervention of the British. Ignoring the fact that Uniara was under Jaipur and there were documentary proofs that Bamaur was granted to the Chief of Uniara in ishtmurar ijara, the Resident declared that the district belonged to Tonk and Uniara should pay rent to that State as a feudatory of the Nawab. Jaipur was instructed not to interfere. The Governor General also agreed with the Resident and thus the district of Bamaur passed under the Nawab (nos. 683, 688 and 805).

Garrisons were kept in the forts of the State. Many of the troops were provided by the thakurs and jagirdars who held large jagirs for their maintenance. As the British had taken the guarantee of protection under Treaty of 1818, the new Prime Minister (Jhuntharam Sanghi) thought it unnecessary to keep the garrisons or jamiyats there. Some troops were, therefore, disbanded and this created a case for the resumption of qiledari jagirs. The affected qiledars approached the Agent who became interested in giving protection to those for whom the guarantee had already been given. But the Governor General forbade him to interfere in the rights and powers of the Regent queen mother.

The order for reduction of the garrisons was received with a great shock in the Ranthambhor fort because a large number of contingent was furnished by the thakurs there while the khalsa soldiers were in a limited number. The khalsa jamiyatdars, qiledars and risaldars expressed their readiness to obey the orders conveyed through Bakhshi Mannalal (nos. 1011 and 1017) but the consternation was greater among the thakurs whose men were in majority and who enjoyed the benefit of security from the British. When they revolted, considerable army was sent from the State and the fort was encircled The British Government was also requested for help but it was refused on grounds of this being an internal affair. On the top of it, the Agency at Jaipur was closed on November 17, 1830 and it was ordered that the Agent at Ajmer would act for the Agent at Jaipur and Udaipur directly (no 762). Some other jagirdars, whose security was taken by the British Government, also joined the revolt at Ranthambhor. The British Government declined to render any kind of help (no. 741) but decided to take the security of the rebels back (nos. 685, 777 and 825). Thakur Bahadur Singh of Jhilai and his son Bhupal Singh were at the head of these revolts so their guarantee was withdrawn (nos. 760, 778, 782, 795 and 796). Similarly, other thakurs were informed that they would be deprived of the British security if they acted to harm the prestige of the State. The Agent sent a list of the rebel jagirdars and verified through his 'man' to collect the names of those thakurs who had joined the rebels and who were inside the fort (no. 685).

At last the qiledars and thakurs in the Ranthambhor fort surrendered to Sanghi Jhuntharam through Bakhshi Mannalal. Their faults were forgiven and the Political Agent thanked Maji Sahiba and Jhuntharam for this (no. 793).

Other Jagirdars also became favourable to the Maharaja and his ministers Sanghi Hukum Chand and Jhuntharam. Thakur Sheo Singh Rajawat (nos. 881-82), Rao Bahadur Salamat Singh of Barwara (nos. 893 and 1012), Sher Singh (nos. 873 and 891) and Bahadur Singh (no. 1019) acknowledged the khas ruqqas and promised to be present whenever called.

It can be imagined that it was Rawal Bairisal who was playing at the back of all these disturbances (nos. 803 and 832). He and the security holders were contemplating to hold a conference and to cause as much harm as they could to the Maji Sahiba's prestige but R. Cavendish, Resident at Ajmer, dissuaded them from doing so (no. 780). He ordered the Rawal to obey the commands of the Regent mother and to desist from sending his vakil to attend on him in order to show his separate identity (no. 781). The Nazim of suba Ajmer also withdrew the three chaprasis who were detailed to attend the Rawal (no. 779). At the same time Cavendish forwarded all the letters written by and to Rawal Bairisal to Maji Sahiba (nos. 754 and 797) requesting her to forgive his faults (no. 765). He also wrote to all the jagirdars of the State not to write letters to him directly but to submit their petitions to the Maharaja (no. 761).

It appears that Major John Low had understood and realized the goodness of Maji's administration so he began to help her in suppressing the thakurs who were acting against her under a notion of British support.

After his retirement, Maji Sahiba wrote to Cavendish that the thakurs were not on good terms with her since the retirement of John Low. She requested him to take proper action against them. Major John Low issued certificates from his camp near Khanwa to Jhuntharam and Her Highness Maji Sahiba for good work, willing compliance and sincere co-operation in carrying out the interest of British concern (nos. 784-85).

Boundary disputes were frequent on the frontiers of Jaipur State facing Jodhpur, Bikaner, Karauli and Tonk. The Resident, therefore, wrote to the Maharaja to send his vakil in his court (no. 748).

Huge arrears of tribute had accrued against Khetri, a vassal of the Jaipur State. Demands were being made by the State but the Chief innocently submitted an application against it which the Resident rejected by saying that he should perform the obligations of his overlord. Cavendish wrote to the State that the Chief of Khetri was asked to settle the mamla of Jaipur which he had not paid for many years. It was also enjoined on him not to enter Khetri and Jaipur till further orders (nos. 759 and 786).

Sambhar was under the joint control of Jaipur and Jodhpur. Officers of both the States were stationed there to look after their respective areas. A reservoir was being built on a common piece of land by Jodhpur without consulting the Jaipur authorities. This was objected to and the Political Agent had to intervene (no. 773).

The Jodhpur Maharaja and some chiefs of that State complained against Jaipur for giving support and shelter to Dhonkal Singh, a claimant to Jodhpur gaddi, who was living in Shekhawati and the borders of Bikaner. The A.G.G. informed Jhuntharam that he had written to the Maharaja of Jodhpur to bring the rebels under control (no. 772).

It was emphasised by the British Government that there were numerous fortresses in Shekhawati and Torawati where the robbers and plunderers took shelter after committing crimes. When they were pressed and chased they fled away in the neighbouring states and committed thefts there also. The British Government was pledged to protect those states so they offered to assist Jaipur in suppressing the plunderers (no. 771). Jhuntharam did not approve British interference and sent an expedition under Bakhshi Mannalal who succeeded in suppressing and expelling some robbers and dacoits who ran away and took shelter in the territories of Bikaner and Jodhpur. The courts of those States refused to surrender the culprits and fugitives from Jaipur. Though the action of sending forces in Shekhawati was taken with the consent of the British Resident (nos. 767, 768 and 775) yet he ignored the complaints lodged against the robbers and dacoits who had taken shelter in other States. Consequently, the Maji Sahiba wrote to the British Government and Col. Lockett was appointed to manage the affairs of Shekhawati and Torawati (nos. 747 and 751).

This appointment was, however, welcomed and the Maji promised to provide all military assistance to the Colonel in suppressing the Ladkhanis, Kaimkhanis, Salahadiwalas and the robbers. One Shambhudayal was appointed to help the Colonel (nos. 809, 812 and 824). The State proposed to maintain a small contingent in Shekhawati through Bakhshi Mithalal and Rao Shambhu Singh. Col. Lockett presented a scheme for establishing peace in Shekhawati and Cavendish approved of it (no. 702).

"Later, the Governor General decided to take over Shekhawati and Torawati as well as Sambhar in order to establish peace there and to realise the outstanding amount of mamla." On the arrival of Col. Lockett in Shekhawati some of the chiefs such as Lakshman Singh, Hamir Singh and Sheonath Singh etc., felt happy and informed the Maharaja that the Colonel had started making enquiries about the thefts and robberies (no. 1021).

Maji Sahiba wrote to the Agent at Ajmer to instruct Col. Lockett to realise Rs. 1,00,000/-, the outstanding amount, from Ramnath Purohit of Khetri. who was allied with the robbers (no. 820).

Lord William Bentinck informed Maharaja Sawai Jai Singh III that Cavendish was appointed as A.G.G. for managing the affairs of Jaipur, Jodhpur and Udaipur following the disturbances at Sawai Madhopur (no. 734).

It appears that Cavendish's attitude was friendly and sympathetic towards Jaipur. In an undated letter (no. 833) the Maji Sahiba expresses her satisfaction over Cavendish's work. He was so much concerned with Jaipur that on his transfer to another province he gave information to the Maji Sahiba to deposit the mamla dues at once (no. 695). Accordingly, a hundi for Rs. 4,00,000/- was sent to him through Lala Hardayal vakil.

Cavendish had a soft corner for Rawal Bairisal also. He left no chance to recommend him to the Maji Sahiba, sometimes for appointment and sometimes for pardoning his faults (no. 829). The Rawal also continued his efforts from all corners. He used to write to the State vakils to present his letters and applications to the British authorities (nos. 570 and 637)

Maji Sahiba complained several times about the deplorable condition of the administration due to the irresponsible attitude of the British officers. She clearly expressed that Col. Clock took bribes and set the robbers and thieves free with the looted property (no. 816).

Cavendish, the Agent at Ajmer, also complained that there was great disorder in the internal management of the State (no. 669). The Governor General, therefore, ordered that all cases of thefts and robberies on the boundary of the State would be dealt with by the Agent or his assistant (no. 681).

Martin Blake was appointed to settle the boundary disputes (no. 742). The Maji Sahiba detailed Shambhudayal and Lakshminarain to represent the State at Delhi in the court of Mr. Blake (no. 806). Later, Francis Moore was appointed for this task (no. 721).

Inter-state rahdari duty was charged from the traders and cattle sellers who passed through the State.

The British used to appoint reporters as akhbarnavis in the courts of the states. Khushvakhtrai (no 690) and Muhammad Moin-ud-din (no. 718) were appointed as news writers at the Jaipur Court.

The Governor General, perhaps on Rawal's complaint, ordered that Sanghi Jhuntharam be dismissed and should not be allowed to enter in the Jaipur territory.

It appears that Maharaja Sawai Jai Singh III, having attained majority, had met Col. Lockett at Ajmer and discussed about the affairs of his state (no. 701, dated January, 31, 1829).

Lord William Bentinck informed Maharaja Sawai Jai Singh III in his kharita (no. 733) dated November 1, 1831 that George IV, King of England, died on June 26, 1830 and the Duke of Lawrence succeeded him on the throne of England as William IV.

Lord William Bentinck informed the Maharaja that R. Cavendish had been deputed to attend the gaddinashini of the Maharaja of Gwalior and Col. Lockett was appointed as Agent to the Governor General at Ajmer (no. 697). This shows that the British had also adopted the procedure of the Mughals to send their representatives at the investiture of the new Maharaja.

Maji Bhattianiji expired in 1833.

Maharaja Sawai Jai Singh III also suddenly took flight to the other world on February 4, 1835.

On the death of Maharaja S. Jai Singh III, Jhuntharam expressed his desire to quit the office of the Prime Minister and called Major Alves to Jaipur immediately.

Maji Chandravatji, the mother of the new king, Sawai Ram Singh II (born on Bhadra Sudi 14, 1891 V.S.), now became the Regent. The following documents carry information about some major events during her regime.

Rupa *badaran (lady controller of stores) had been a principal supporter of the Regent mother Bhattianiji and Sanghi Jhuntharam. She was exercising her influence in the palace even after the death of Bhattianiji. Enquiries were made from her and other persons about the wealth of the former badarans. She informed that Chandu badaran's belongings were very costly. It was a practice that whenever a badaran or a kamdar died their assets were taken over, after scrutiny, by the Raj. As no report regarding the take-over of Chandu's wealth was traceable, the kamdar's son and her maid servant Ganga were arrested. Major John Ludlow requested Maji Sahiba Chandravatji for help and co-operation in the investigations (no. 1673). In the enquiry, Rupa was also found guilty of many irregularities, misdeeds and of filtering away considerable wealth from the Zanani deorhi. Much force had to be used for turning her out for punishment (no. 1708).

A very unhappy incident took place in Jaipur on June 4, 1835, when Major Alves came to City Palace with his three assistants who discussed with the Queen mother. While returning, one Fateh Singh made an attack on him with his sword. The Major was wounded but he and his two assistants anyhow managed to escape while the third one, Mr. Blake fell a victim to the frenzy of a mob in Kishanpol Bazar and was put to death by the Mina guards.

The Maji Sahiba was quite perturbed and became afraid of the bad consequences She sought protection for her son and the State from the British Government. Rawal Bairisal and other thakurs also wrote letters to Major Alves who convinced Maji Sahiba that the rights and interests of the Maharaja would be preserved certainly (no. 1666).

It was suspected that Jhuntharam and his associates had intrigued and instigated the assassins of Mr. Blake. Capt. Ludlow expressed his views that, if not personally, Jhuntharam's wealth might have contrived the 'fatal drama'. A court was constituted of two vakils and three thakurs to give verdict on the charges against Jhuntharam and his party. At the same time some letters exchanged between Jhuntharam and Hukumchand, Shivalal and Nanda were recovered at Agra and Jaipur. The court awarded capital punishment to Diwan Amarchand, Hidayat-ullah, Sheolal Sahu, Manikchand, Jhuntharam and Hukumchand and various terms of imprisonment to other minor participants in the act. Amarchand and Hidayat-ullah were executed on November 25, 1836 and Jhuntharam and Hukumchand were moved to Chunar fort for life. But the Governor General and the Court of Directors "were never convinced of Jhuntharam's guilt".

* A badaran used to be the lady-controller of the household of a Maharani or Maji. She rose either from the class of maid servants, who came in dowry with the Maharani or from a nurse who fostered a royal child with her milk. She could move outside the zanani deorhi but in a conveyance and with proper guards. Badarans had their own families and their relations were also employed in the State or Household according to merit. A nurse was called a dhai, her husband a dhau and her son a dhaibhai. The members of the family of such a badaran were called dhau badaris. Members of the family of a badaran were known as badaris. Later, they developed into a caste in itself. A badaran used to get a fat salary or enjoyed a jagir. She used to hold charge of the wealth of her mistress and so her belongings were considered to be mixed. It was, therefore, that she had to account for her wealth after the death of the Maji or the Maharani, whom she served. The same rule was held good in case of a kamdar—the manager of the sarkar of a Maji, Maharani or a pardayat, who held big jagirs for their maintenance. Some badarans became very influential by dint of their mistress' authority in the state affairs and amassed wealth by taking bribes. They built properties and left them to be enjoyed by their relations, if proved genuine in the after enquiries.

Chandu badaran laid down a garden on Jaipur–Amber road. A badaranji's temple and haveli (in Man kayath ki gali) are situated in the Chandpol Bazar. Kesar badaran's garden was later developed into a royal guest-house by M.S. Ram Singh II as Rambagh and still later into a Royal residential Palace by M. S. Man Singh II. It is now the most luxurious hotel of Jaipur.

Rupa Badaran's garden 'Rup nivas' had also been till now a known place for picnic-goers in the Purana ghat, Agra Road, It is said that she was kept under custody there in the garden. It is adjacent to Vidyadhar's garden and is now used as a home for destitute women. There is also a temple of Rup Chandramaji near Sanganeri Gate, which was built by Rupa badaran.

During the minority of Sawai Ram Singh II and Regency of Maji Chandravatji there were frequent exchanges of kharitas between the Regent mother, Agent to the Governor General and the Political Agent. Some of the British Agents were particularly interested in the minor Maharaja's education and training.

Major Thorsby also expressed his satisfaction about the progress made by the Maharaja in his studies, horse-riding, archery and physical education (no. 1677).

Mr. Ludlow, the Political Agent in 1846, took personal interest in the education and training of the minor Maharaja. Pt. Shivadin of Agra was appointed to give lessons to him. Mr. Ludlow took reports from the teacher about the progress in the studies of the Maharaja from time to time. In his kharita (no. 1651 written in Hindi), he expressed his pleasure to have learnt through Pt. Shivadinji that the Maharaja was taking interest in studying English, Persian and Urdu.

As Sanghi Jhuntharam had failed as an administrator so the following arrangements were made (no. 1665).

1. Rawal Bairisal was appointed as Huzur Musahib,
2. Bakhshi Mannalal as Fauj Musahib and
3. Diwan Kishanlal as Desh Musahib (revenue). All of them were to work under A.G.G.'s directions.

A Regency Council was also formed (no. 1665) consisting of Rawal Bairisal of Samod, Rao of Manoharpur, Rao Jiwan Singh of Duni, Th. Bahadur Singh of Jhilai and Th. Nawal Singh of Sali. They were called Panch Musahibs. The Rawal was to act as Jai Huzur Musahib that is incharge of the Royal Household affairs. They had to seek orders from the Regent, Maji Sahiba Chandravatji.

Some objections were raised against the inclusion of Munshi Kishanlal in the Ministry on account of his being a non-Jaipurian. Major Alves tried to convince Maji Chandravatji that Diwan Kishanlal was appointed for his competence and that he would be helpful in liquidating the arrears of mamla dues (no. 1710)

The Rawal, according to his nature, acted on his own accord and ignored Maji Sahiba. He approached the British Agency and the Governor General who appointed him Mukhtar with full powers. Major Alves recommended that a siropao of mukhtari be awarded to the Rawal (no. 1674). After a series of events, not at all pleasant, the Rawal felt that his position was not very enviable and he could not pull on without the support of the British Government so he began to demand for the appointment of a permanent British Agent at Jaipur.

In 1837, a theft occurred in the palace treasury. It was suspected that the act was committed through the connivance of Sanghi Jhuntharam and his aasociates but it was recovered through the efforts of Rawalji and panch sardars (no. 1712).

Now, Rawal Bairisal tried to establish a strong hold over the court with the help of the British authorities. The Maji and some local sardars devised to overthrow him but their efforts failed. The British followed their policy to maintain him in power. Lt. Col. Alves continued to pursue his favourite plan to appoint a permanent Agent at Jaipur. The Government of India took no practical notice of his proposals but Rawal Bairisal died and the Regent Maji appointed his son Shiva Singh as Minister. This gave a momentum to the views of Lt. Col. Alves because the Maji had made this appointment without the prior approval of the Governor General. At last, Major Ross was designated as Agent at Jaipur in September, 1838 apparently to collect the accrued amount of tribute (no. 1630). He also expressed his satisfaction on the appointment of Rawal Shiva Singh (no. 1631).

Lord Auckland, Governor General, also assured that all attention would be given in case of all the charitable endowments of the Maharaja in Allahabad, Faizabad and Man Mandir including other buildings at Banaras (no. 1632).

Col. J. Sutherland, Political Agent forwarded copies of a notification in the names of Maji Sahiba, all the sardars and officials of the State that the British Government had taken up the affairs and management of Jaipur State until M.S. Ram Singh attained majority (nos. 1678 and 1715).

Kishan Singh Khangarot had occupied the fort of Kalakh, about 20 miles from Jaipur by bribing the Nathawat Qiledar Bhairon Singh and Lala Chhogalal, kamdar in 1840. Before doing so he had secured adhesion of Th. Megh Singh of Diggi, Ranjit Singh of Dhula and some relatives from Jodhpur, Bikaner, Alwar and Kishangarh states. Major Thorsby could capture some letters exchanged between Kishan Singh and Chhogalal and forwarded copies of the same to Maji Sahiba with suggestions to dismiss Chhogalal at once (no. 1676).

The Maji implored the British Agent's help to recover the fort from Kishan Singh. In spite of the unusual heroism shown by Major Forestor and his son with the Shekhawati Brigade, Jaipur army and also of Major Thorsby's presence, the fort could not be taken. Then the Major sent for artillery from the Rajputana Field Force. Before the force arrived there the garrison surrendered only on the guarantee for their lives on Paush sudi 7, 1897 (A.D. 1840) Major Thorsby informed Maji Sahiba that the fort of Kalakh had been taken possession of and the rebels Kishan Singh Khangarot and Bhairon Singh Nathawat were arrested. They would be duly punished (no. 1706). Later, Kishan Singh was reported to have stabbed himself fataly with a knife. His brother Bishan Singh and four other leading rebels were interned in various forts for indefinite period.

A large amount had accrued against the State on account of the arrears of tribute. This was a great cause of concern for the Maji. She tried to settle the audit accounts of the Company through one Mr. Garden at Calcutta who agreed to work at the rate of one per cent of commission as instructed by Rawat Ranjit Singh of Dhula and Darogha Maliram. Arrangements on behalf of the Company were to be confirmed by Mr. Sutherland and Mr. Rawson (no. 1650).

The Political Agent, on his own and sometimes on representation by the traders, used to advise the Regent Queen mother about the administration. Major Thorsby suggested Maji Sahiba Chandravatji that the mapa rahdari tax realised from the traders at Bassi be assessed at the rates of last year and the same be notified on the board at Chandni Chowk. The ijardars be instructed accordingly (no. 1654).

Some ceremonial and social traditions are also reflected in some of the documents. The rulers of Indian states used to exchange gifts on certain festivals and ceremonies. Some articles of gift were sent to Udaipur on the occasion of tika ceremony of Maharana Sardar Singh in 1839 with Hardeoram Bankawat (of Lawan) and Bakhshi Shivalal (no. 1704). It was a custom to send such gifts from the ruler of one state to that of the other at such occasions.

The bearers were offered bidayagi at the time of departure by the recipients. Similarly, gifts were sent for Maharana Jawan Singh through Daroga Ganeshnarain (no. 1707) in 1837.

Maharana Sarup Singh sent a message of condolence on the demise of Maharaja Ram Singh's dadiji (wife of M.S. Jagat Singh) in 1842.

Maharana Sardar Singh acknowledged a welfare note from M.S. Ram Singh through Rai Gaurilal (no. 1716)

In 1840, perhaps the Maharana of Udaipur proposed for the betrothal of his daughter with Maharaja S. Ram Singh and placed the condition that the first marriage of the Maharaja would be with the Udaipur Princess. The proposal came through Major Thorsby. The Maji Sahiba Chandravatji replied that the betrothal could be settled only after tallying the horoscopes (no. 1662).

It was a custom that the boy Maharaja was not taken out of the palace until the jadula ceremony (shearing of the locks for the first time) was performed in the temple of Jamvaymata, the family deity at Ramgarh, 18 miles North East of Jaipur. This ceremony had to be performed on an auspicious day fixed by the pandits.

In November, 1842, the Resident wrote to Maji Sahiba that the Governor General would return from Simla to Delhi in the first week of February, 1843. There he would like to meet all the chiefs and the rajas. He further suggested that it would be appreciated if the Maharaja was taken to Jamvaymata in the next month for the Jadula ceremony so that the Governor General, who was very eager to see him, could meet him also (no. 1656).

The jadula ceremony was performed on Baisakh sudi 12, 1899 V.S. (A.D. 1842) and Maharaja Ratan Singh of Bikaner, Maharana Sarup Singh of Udaipur and Dadiji Sahiba of Udaipur sent their blessings on the occasion (nos. 1718, 1720, 1721 and 1722).

A group of Afghans had come to Amber from Kabul during the time of Maharaja Man Singh I. They were given shelter there and subsequently came to Jaipur. Here too they were given resort. Through the instigations of some evil persons they revolted and tried to create terror. The Maji Sahiba wrote to Major Thorsby that on Sunday, Phalgun sudi 11, 1899, a number of foreign Musalmans (no. 1664) had entered Jaleb Chowk (the eastern courtyard of the palace) and Chandni Chowk (the northern courtyard inside Tripolia) in the early morning and captured the cannons kept in the Jaleb Chowk. They had shut the Sireh deorhi gate as well as the Tripolia gate from inside. Adequate security arrangements were made to guard the mardani and zanani deorhis. Th. Lakshman Singh was informed and he duly came with the forces and entered through Sri Govinddevaji ki deorhi. Some of the rebels were killed and others were arrested. Ramchandra harkara was reported to be a party with and an associate of the rebels. The Afghans residing in Jaipur were known as thobariyas. This incident was, therefore, termed as thobariyon ki larai.

Maji Chandravatji, though lacked the competence and strong will of her mother-in-law, Bhattianiji, yet she was a gentle and sincere lady. She was devotedly interested in the bright future of her son and the welfare of her State (no. 1670) and always tried to maintain good relations with the British officers for this cause.

In 1839, Col. Sutherland was suffering from a boil. The Maji enquired after his welfare (no. 1653).

Accidently, Major Thorsby fell down from a horse. Maji Sahiba expressed her concern over it (no. 1660). Also she expressed her pleasure over the news of his recovery from illness (no. 1667).

The Maji Sahiba even made an offer to surrender her jagir yielding Rs. 51,000/- per annum to liquidate the accrued amount of the tribute and debts. Mr. John Ludlow commended this action of the Maji Sahiba (no. 1672).

Sir Henry Hardinge addressed to M.S. Ram the Singh II on January 23, 1846 (no. 1636) that Sikhs of Lahore had revolted against the British but they were all defeated and took flight beyond Satluz. Ninety-one cannons were taken away from them as booty. They were completely defeated on the 10th day of the month of February, 1846 (nos. 1636 and 1639).

The Government had requested the Maharaja for help against the Sikh rebels in the Deccan also. It was requested that four or five companys with two platoons of tilangans[1] and eight light cannons be kept ready for despatch (no. 1645). The Maharaja expressed his willingness to help.

John Ludlow was very affectionate to Maharaja S. Ram Singh. He often met and gave political instructions to him. He also kept him well-informed about his movements in the State. In an undated kharita he regrets to have started from the headquarters in connection with the rebels Dungji[1] etc. of Shekhawati, without meeting His Highness (no. 1644).

Maharaja Ram Singh became eighteen years old in September, 1851. Col. Low recommended that he should be invested with full powers and the British Government readily agreed to it. He was accordingly bestowed with a khilat by the Governor General, in pursuance of the Mughal tradition. Thus, the minority period ended in Jaipur which had continued for about 30 years.

Rawal Shiva Singh, son of Bairisal, who had become Prime Minister during the minority, still continued. The Political Agent was also not withdrawn by the British Government. Major Richards, who succeeded Col. Low, was the Political Agent at that time. There were sad reports about him. He frequently took bribes and gave little attention to the disturbances. This was the state of things when the young Maharaja took the reins of administration in his hands.

Emperor Bahadur Shah II, the last Mughal Emperor issued a farman of compliments and friendship in his second regnal year (no. 282 fig. 52) in the name of the Maharaja.

It appears that the Maharaja paid special attention to the regularization and consolidation of the properties beyond the State. The vakils, mukhtars and munsrims managed these properties. They rented out houses, shops and plots of land and carried out repairs wherever necessary. Exchange of properties, new purchases and cases of possession etc. were the subjects dealt with by these officers, as already envisaged.

After the fall of Jhuntharam, the districts of Shekhawati and Torawati had been restored to the State. Still a local army was kept there which was known as Shekhawati Brigade. Though formally it was an integral part of the Jaipur army yet was controlled by a British officer who acted under orders of the Agent to the Governor General. The Brigade could not be employed by the State authority anywhere else without his prior approval. With the help of this Brigade the number of robbers and dacoits was reduced by far. But some thakurs of that area joined with the thakurs of Churu in Bikaner State and those of Jodhpur State to create unrest. This gave the British a pretext to revive their old project of establishing their supremacy over that region. Mr. Hardcastle was appointed and he wrote to the Maharaja about his proceeding to Shekhawati and requested that he might be helped in every respect (no. 1541).

A revolt against the British broke out in 1857 and there were disturbances on the borders of Shekhawati also. The Resident at Jaipur, therefore, informed and requested M.S. Ram Singh II to help by deputing 200

1. Dungji or Dungar Singh of Patoda was an influential risaldar in the Shekhawati Brigade. A number of petty jagirdars of Sikar such as Rao Raja Bhairon Singh, Mukund Singh Khawaswal of Singrawat, Hukum Singh of Sewot and Ram Singh of Nechhawa were not on good terms with Rao Raja Ram Pratap Singh of Sikar. His own kinsmen, the Thakurs of Bathoth, Patoda, Singhasana and Paldi were favouring the cause of Bhairon Singh, step brother of Ram Pratap Singh, who was seeking help from the British. Thakur Dungar Singh of the Shekhawati Brigade revolted with some of his associates of the Brigade. This group began to plunder arms, horses, camels and cash from the villages in Shekhawati. After plundering, they used to take shelter in Bikaner. Col. Alves wrote to Maharaja Ratan Singh of Bikaner to arrest Dungar Singh. The Maharaja of Bikaner entrusted the task of tracing out Dungar Singh to Khuman Singh, who was a brother-in-law of Jawahar Singh of Bathoth. But Khuman Singh did not obey the Maharaja and joined the group of Dungar Singh instead. In 1838 Thakurs Jawahar Singh, Dungar Singh, Khuman Singh, Hari Singh and Karan Singh etc. looted many villages of Bikaner and proceeded towards Ajmer Merwada via Jodhpur and Kishangarh. Dungar Singh was staying at Jharwasa with his relative Bhairon Singh, who betrayed him and consequently the British forces of Nasirabad Cantonment arrested him. He was interned in the Agra Fort.

Jawahar Singh deputed Lotia Jat and Sanwta Meena to collect information from Agra and then took about five hundred Rajputs to advance in the form of a marriage party towards Agra where they stayed for two weeks on the pretext of the death of bridegroom's maternal uncle. Ultimately on the occasion of Muharram, they managed anyhow to break into the fort. They succeeded in taking out Dungar Singh with other prisoners. The marriage party then proceeded towards Bharatpur and Alwar and from there came to attack Nasirabad Cantonment. They looted the treasury. Many skirmishes between Dungji's group and British soldiers took place and finally Dungji was killed. But he is still alive in the ballads of Rajasthan. His adventures are narrated by village singers even to-day.

cavalery and 1000 nagas at Singhana, Narnaul, Surajgarh, Jhajhjhar and Kanod etc. The details were explained to Pt. Shivadin and Bakhshi Mannalal (no. 1572).

Col. Henry Lawrence, officiating Agent to the Governor General, again informed Maharaja Sawai Ram Singh that there was a revolt against the British Government. As the Jaipur State was a friend of the Government it was requested that the forces would be sent to Delhi for help and suppression of the rebels (no. 1559).

Jaipur forces, like those of other states, were employed to help the British. The Resident at Jaipur informed the Maharaja that the Scindia and the ruler of Bharatpur had also come to friendly terms with the British and so he too should be ready He also requested that Nazim Bhopal Singh should be sent with adequate forces on the boundary of Kotputli (no. 1567).

There are some more important papers which may stand as evidence to the happenings during the Mutiny of 1857.

The Jaipur army of 5000 troops marched under Captain Eden to maintain order in Mathura and Gurgaon districts These troops relieved the British Government of the distress by rescuing some English ladies and gentlemen who were in trouble on account of the Mewati rebels. The Resident thanked the Maharaja for maintaining peace and order in the city and giving shelter to his wife and children in the palace—Maji ka Bagh (no. 1578). He also thanked from Hodal for rendering help during the time of Mutiny (no. 1566).

Some of the rebels escaped from Gwalior (perhaps with Tantya Tope) and passed through Jaipur territory and stayed at Jhilai. Capt. Eden wrote to the Maharaja that Harsukh, a khabarnavis, reported to Harnarain Tiwari (officer incharge of the Intelligence Department) that eleven rebels with five horses and one elephant stayed at Jhilai and Th. Bhawani Singh had taken them under his shelter. Rahim Ali Khan and Amir Khan, the notorious rebels of Gwalior, were among them. He further advised that as a precautionary measure the cannons lying outside the city wall should be taken inside (no. 1595).

When Tantya Tope passed through Jaipur territory a minor incident took place at Hindaun. Tope demanded that 500 troops and 2 guns should be surrendered to him from the Regiment which was stationed at the tehsil of Hindaun. The troops did not surrender nor made an attack on the rebels. Thus, a conflict was avoided. The British Government recognised this conduct of the forces as appreciable (no. 1596).

Though the Maharaja and his subordinate thakurs had been helping the British with consistency and perseverance and the Supreme Government expressed their gratitude also yet Rawal Shiva Singh was suspected to have been allied with the rebels[1]. The Agent at Mewar informed the Maharaja about his contacts with suspicious men like Usman Khan, Saadullah Khan and Walayat Ali, etc. He further requested the Maharaja for directing the Rawal to live in the village of his jagir till further orders. Usman Khan was to be detained in the Natanion-ki-haveli and Walayat Ali was to be dismissed from his post (no. 1589). The Political Agent at Jaipur also reiterated to comply with the above directions.

Nawab Walayat Ali Khan was the faujdar of Jaipur. A man carrying letters for him from the Empress Zeenut Mahal was caught. Mian Usman Khan was a fugitive from Bhopal and Saadullah Khan was a vakil of Jaipur in the A.G.G.'s Court. Thakur Lakshman Singh was said to have given shelter or helped in the escape of Zarif Khan, a wounded rebel. Saadullah Khan had become an adopted brother of Lakshman Singh, so he was only banished from Jaipur while the other two were interned into different forts. It was also reported that Rawal Shiva Singh was present at Delhi when the revolt broke out and stayed there for about two weeks. His vakil presented nazars to Bahadur Shah and promised with him to return to Delhi with Jaipur forces. The Rawal's house had become a halting place for the scheme-makers of the Mutiny. It is also said that he tried to pursue the Maharaja to slacken his attachment with the British. Therefore, he was asked to leave Jaipur and live in his jagir village, Samod. His brother Lakshman Singh, however, continued as minister and a friend of the Political Agent who was in distress at that time.

It is known from kharita no. 1594, from the Political Agent, Jaipur to M.S. Ram Singh II that some civil officers and thakurs showed valour in repelling the rebels. Names of Ramkumar motmid or Naib-Bakhshi, Thakur Lakshman Singh of Chomu, Lala Kishorilal, Thakur Jujhar Singh Champawat, Thakur Ramnath Singh of Diggi and Thakur Dhir Singh of Boraj are specifically mentioned. Again, the A.G.G. offered thanks to the Maharaja for the help rendered by him during the Mutiny of 1857. He has specially mentioned the names of some chiefs and officers who showed courage in facing and repelling the mutineers e.g. Thakur Lakshman Singh, musahib Raj; Pt. Shivadin; Ranjit Singh, faujdar; Thakur Shiva Singh of Boraj; Thakur Pratap Singh of Ladana; Thakur Inder Singh of Dudu; Thakur Bakhtawar Singh of Lava; Nawab Faiz Ali Khan, Bakhshi; Maulavi Muhi-uddin, Naib Faujdar; Rai Keshavanath Vakil; Jeewan Ali; Capt. Ram Kumar, motmid and Ramsukh, Jamadar (no. 1558). In recognition of their services the British Government issued khilats for them and granted the pargana of Kotkasim to the Maharaja in perpetuity. It was also ordered that the pargana should be added to his territory (nos 1532-1533).

The Mutiny ended and Queen Victoria took over the reins of the Government of India from the East India Company. The Governor General forwarded a copy of the proclamation of the Queen to the Maharaja with his kharita dated October 25, 1858 (no. 1564). Capt. Eden delivered the kharita to the Maharaja on November 1, 1858, in a durbar held at the City Palace at 5.00 P.M. The Political Agent congratulated the Maharaja for the award of the medal of Star of India and jagir of Kotkasim by Queen Victoria for the help rendered by him during the Mutiny.

Maji Sahiba Chandravatji breathed her last on Paush Sudi 15, Samvat 1915 (A.D 1858)

The affairs of Khetri were running out of control during the administration of Maji Ranawatji of that estate. Great mismanagement was reported in Khetri. Some forces were, therefore, sent to Kotputli to bring it under khalsa but Ranawatji complained to the Governor General, who ordered that the Jaipur forces should be withdrawn from Kotputli. The Jaipur Maharaja had no right over that district as it was granted to the Chief of Khetri by the British Government (no. 1556). But the mismanagement of Khetri was a matter of great concern. He, therefore, gave his consent to the appointment of Thomas H. Hardley for the management of Khetri. A large amount of debt, taken from the sahukars, had accrued against the Chief. (no. 1581).

One Kishan Singh Ranawat (perhaps a relative of the Maji), who was a rebel from Alwar, was creating unrest in Khetri. The A.G.G. ordered that Kishan Singh should be arrested and sent to Delhi with the booty he had acquired during the Mutiny (nos. 1569, 1575).

A large amount of mamla had also accrued against Khetri as the Chief had not paid to the State for many years. At last the matter was decided by the A.G.G. who informed the Maharaja that a sum of Rs. 1,00,000/- had been paid against the mamla dues through Pt. Shivadinji for which a receipt had been given to the officials of Khetri. They had been instructed also to maintain proper accounts in future. It was also decided that Khetri would owe allegiance to the State (no. 1568).

A great famine occurred in 1868. The Secretary of State for India wrote to the Maharaja for help in the famine relief measures (no. 1543). The State granted permission to the merchants for exporting grains outside Jaipur for trade (no. 1539). The Maharaja made all efforts to diminish the evil effects of the famine by abolishing all taxes on transit as well as import and export throughout the Jaipur territory. Her Majesty's Government, gratifying these measures, taken by the Maharaja, increased his salute by two guns (no. 1601).

Similarly, the famine of Bengal (in 1874 A.D.) was a great calamity that befell on the country. Maharaja Sawai Ram Singh and the sardars of his State benevolently contributed Rs. 61.200/- to the Famine Relief Fund of Bengal (nos. 1550 and 1565).

The Maharaja became interested in the works of public welfare and amnesty. The Jaipur State took instrumental interest in the scheme for the eradication of small-pox by vaccination. Vaccinators were trained and posted in major villages (no. 1562).

Maharaja Ram Singh made a further contribution of Rs. 21,000/- for the help of the poor (no. 1548). He granted Rs. 500/- per annum for the help of poor students of a school at Ajmer (no. 1554).

Similarly, the Maharaja acceeded to the advice of the A.G.G. to construct rest-houses in the State for the convenience and comfort of the travellers (no. 1545). Those old tibaras and piaus can still be seen at regular distances on the highway roads.

Vakils of the concerned states were deputed to the court of the Agent to the Governor General. They were called the Panchayat Vakils. All informations were sent to the Maharaja prior to introducing any changes in the rules governing the Panchayat vakils (no. 1547).

Other important Political informations were also sent to the Maharaja from the A.G.G.'s court, for example—the English got victory over the Russians in 1855 (no. 1555) at Sevastopol with the alliance of France and Sardinia (no. 1563). The Nawab of Tonk was dethroned on account of his complicity in the atrocities committed at Lava. His minor son Ibrahim Ali Khan was placed on the throne under the regentship of his uncle, Ibadullah Khan; further that Lava would be considered as a separate Chiefship having direct connection with the British Government (no. 1587).

Major Burton, officiating Agent at Jaipur, proposed to the Maharaja for the repairs of the road from Jaipur to Agra. Though it was augmented with an interest for the prosperity of the State, yet the British Agent's aim was to have a good military road in the strategic area. The Maharaja, out of his noble temperament and sincerity of purpose, readily agreed and donated a handsome amount of 1,20,000/- for the construction of the road from Jaipur to Bharatpur frontiers, a distance of 80 miles. The A.G.G. thanked the Maharaja for this benevolent donation (no. 1599).

The A.G.G. forwarded a copy of the notification to the effect that Malhar Rao Gaikwad was dethroned from the gaddi of Baroda in the interestof the public in 1875. (no. 1549) He further informed that Rani Yamunabai of Baroda, with the consent of all the sardars of the State, had adopted a son Gopal, who was installed on the gaddi as Maharaja Sayaji Rao Gaikwad Bahadur of Baroda (no. 1552).

Regarding the Afghan war, the British Government informed the Maharaja that Shah Shuja-ud-daullah of Afghanistan who was ousted by his traitor servants and revolutionaries in the public, re-took possession of his ancestral property and the capital of his kingdom with the help of the British Government; he had graciously entered in Kabul again (nos. 1635 and 1641).

All the allies of the Company Government were informed that Dost Muhammad Khan was arrested with his son Yar Muhammad Khan at the fort of Ghazani (no. 1671).

Lord Auckland informed M.S. Ram Singh that a son was born to Her Majesty the Queen on November 9, 1841 (no. 1634).

There are references to the war with the Sikhs that took place in 1846 in the following documents :—

In Kharita no. 1636, it is informed that the Sikhs of Lahore had revolted against and attacked on the Government forces suddenly but they were all defeated and driven away beyond Sutluz.

There are some important papers in this collection regarding the Salt Treaty of Jaipur State with the British Government and its further implications about the supply of salt to the Maharaja and adjustment of tribute and income from salt.

The initial treaty was executed on 7.8.1869 between the Political Agent and Nawab Faiz

Ali Khan on behalf of the Maharaja. According to it Rs. 2,75,000/- with 1,72,000 maunds of salt for use in the state and 7000 maunds for the khasa rasovada—the royal kitchen of the Maharaja, were to be supplied annually by the British Government.

The A.G.G. sent the Sambhar lake agreement for acknowledgement on 27.9.1869 (nos. 522 and 522A, figs. 55-56).

The Maharaja wrote a letter regarding the account of income from Sambhar salt for which it was settled that it would be cleared on April 1 and October 1, every year (no. 1536).

On July 23, 1870 Lord Northbrooke, Governor General, informed the Maharaja that according to the Customs Commissioner's letter dated 14.7.1870, the amount payable by the British Government would be in two ways—payment for the cost of salt would be made according to the Raj Samvat (beginning from Bhadra sudi 2) and the amount of royalty would be paid annually according to the Calendar year (no. 1534).

The Agent to the Governor General further confirmed in his letter dated 9.8.1870 that the accounts of royalty on Sambhar Salt would be assessed at the close of the year but the amount of royalty would be adjusted in the next instalment. Tribute and royalty were different subjects and should be treated as such. An agreement was again signed by Col. Beynon and Th. Fateh Singh, Prime Minister, on 8.5.1879 about Sambhar lake (no. 524).*

Gudha and Navan had also come under the British control and so the customs post at Bhangarh was abolished (no. 377).

Other kharitas at nos. 1535, 1537 and 1546 are also about the salt.

It appears that Sawai Ram Singh was worried about the Government's Policy of Lapse in respect of the Indian States. He had an interview with the Governor General at Agra in November, 1859 and discussed about many problems (no. 1584). In March, 1860 the Governor General issued a notice from his camp at Sialkot that the British Government would allow the Maharaja to adopt a successor in case he failed to get a male issue (no. 1580). It was further confirmed and an assurance was given in April, 1862 (no. 1551).

The question had arisen perhaps when the Governor General asked the Maharaja in May, 1853 to send him a copy of the rules and regulations of adoption followed in his State (no. 1588).

During the regime of the Regency Council the British discovered that the amount of tribute fixed on the State was in reality a burden that could be hardly borne. Besides a debt of about 43,00,000/- from the bankers and sahukars had also accrued with an interest of Rs. 1,00,000/- per year. With this they realized the truth what havoc and disorder they had wrought in Jaipur.

Maharaja Sawai Ram Singh, on assuming powers of administration, established friendly relations with the British Government. He pursuaded the authorities and succeeded in getting the heavy amount of tribute reduced from 8,00,000/- to 4,00,000/- only. Regent Maji of S. Jai Singh III represented throughout her regime for the reduction but it went away unheeded due to the unjust and unfavourable remarks made by the Political Agents from time to time. Now through the earnest and repeated efforts of the Maharaja, article 6 of the Treaty of 1818 was cancelled and the tribute of the State was limited to 4,00,000/- only for future. Also the condition to make increases in the tribute in case the revenue of the State exceeded Rs. 40,00,000/- was removed. This decision was conveyed to the Maharaja by the Secretary of State for India through his kharita (no. 625) dated August 12, 1871. Accordingly, a fresh agreement for paying Rs. 4,00,000/- only per year by the Jaipur State was signed by Col. Edward Ridley C. Bradford on behalf of the British Government and Mumtaz-ud-daullah Nawab Faiz Ali Khan Bahadur, C S I. on behalf of the Maharaja of Jaipur (no. 525).

*The document is not available in the Collection but the information, recorded here, is based on the List published by NAI in 1971.

The Maharaja expressed his gratitude at the terms of the Supplementary Treaty under which the tribute was fixed at 4,00,000/- per year. He also promised to spend reasonable amount from the revenue income of his State on irrigation and other works of public utility for the benefit of his subjects.

The Earl of Lytton, Viceroy and Governor General of India, sent a copy of the proclamation of holding an Imperial assemblaze at Delhi on January 1, 1877, proclaiming the message of Her Majesty to the princes and people of India (no. 1616).

The Governor General informed the Maharaja regarding the assumption of the title of Empress of India by the Queen. The A.G.G. requested the Maharaja to attend the Imperial Durbar in Delhi on January 1, 1877 (no. 1619).

Maharaja Sawai Ram Singh died on September 17, 1880. He left no son but had nominated Kaim Singh, the second son of the Chief of Isarda, as his successor.

Kaim Singh sat on the gaddi of Jaipur on September 30, 1880 under the name of Maharaja Sawai Madho Singh. Lord Ripon sent a kharita of condolence to him on the demise of the late Maharaja. He also congratulated the new Maharaja on his accession to the gaddi (no. 623 dated January 21, 1881).

In 1882, the Agent to the Governor General proposed that the Maharaja might be invested with full powers to rule his State. Orders were issued on September 5, 1882, that full powers would be given when the Maharaja attained majority. In the meanwhile he should decide important cases in consultation with the Resident, Eastern States and such cases as had been decided earlier should also be sent to him for review. (no. 1600).

The Maharaja might have been invested with full powers on any day between September 5, 1882 and December 7, 1882, on which day Lord Ripon acknowledged a letter of thanks from him for investing him with full powers (no. 1598).

The first step of reform that M.S. Madho Singh took was to abolish all transit duties on all commodities, with the exception of those on opium and other intoxicating drugs, throughout his State. It was reported to the Viceroy by the A.G.G. and the former expressed his happiness over this reformative action of the Maharaja (no. 1592).

In 1886, the A.G.G. advised the Maharaja to act according to the advice of the Resident (no. 1591).

There was again a famine in 1886 and the A.G.G. advised Maharaja Sawai Madho Singh that the same measures should be adopted in the State which were taken by the Govt. in respect of the famine relief (no. 1590).

In respect of the commendable work done in the State to meet the calamity of famine the Government was pleased to increase the salute of the Maharaja by two guns. This was intimated to the Maharaja by Lord Dufferine, Viceroy and Governor General, from his camp at Darbhanga in his kharita dated March 20, 1887 (no. 1604).

It was at the instance and proposal of the Maharaja that the Indian Peoples' famine Trust was created in 1900 A.D. He contributed Rs. 25 lakhs to this Fund between 1900 and 1906 A.D.

An agreement took place between the British Govt. and Jaipur State regarding the extradition of convicts (no. 627 dated July 9, 1887).

Every Viceroy and A.G.G. informed M.S. Madho Singh about his taking over chargea nd departure from India on the termination of his term (nos. 1608, 1612, 1613, 1620, 1622, 1624 and 1625).

The Governor General conveyed thanks of the Secretary of State for India to the Maharaja for maintaining a Transport Corps of one thousand ponies and four hundred carts for the defence of North West frontiers of India. The Maharaja also offered Rs. 15,00,000/- for defence (nos. 1618 and 1621).

The British Government was pleased to confer the title of Knight Grand Commander of the Order of the Star of India on M.S. Madho Singh (no. 1626). The award was made by Queen Victoria vide her kharita dated May 5, 1900 under her own signature.

The Maharaja undertook his memorable voyage to England in 1902 to attend the Coronation of King Edward VII.

Lord Curzon, Viceroy of India, announced to hold an Imperial Durbar in Delhi on January 1, 1903 and requested the Maharaja to attend it.

Invitations from the rulers of sister states of India were usually received by the Maharaja on the occasions of marriage ceremonies and investiture ceremonies etc. (nos. 1606, 1607, 1617 and 1623).

The Maharaja established a "Walterkrit Rajput Charan Hitkarini Sabha" for the implementation of social reforms among the Rajputs and Charans of his State.[1]

He contributed benevolently for public benefactions and is remembered for his large heartedness and other virtues.

Maharaja Sawai Madho Singh II expired on 7th September, 1922 after a peaceful and glorious reign of 42 years.

The archival material in the Kapaddwara is vast. All these papers can be roughly categorized as—(a) historical documents, maps and plans, (b) day-to-day records of the material preserved and manufactured in the karkhanas, formerly attached to the Kapaddwara, which are important for the study of socio-economic history of the former Jaipur state during the regime of different rulers, (but this collection has not been touched so far) and (c) official files which bear testimony to and throw light on the then system of administration in the State and the Royal Household.

Unfortunately, this collection of historical documents is also not up-to-date and cannot be taken as complete. The reason for this appears to be that such papers began to be kept in the Jaipur State Archives during the later period. A number of documents is mentioned in the old register as issued to the then Mahakama Khas in some cases and all of them did not come back to the Kapad-dwara. The present collection (as given to us for cataloguing) does not contain documents pertaining to M.S. Man Singh II's time. Thus, the present volume consists of such documents as are available from the time of Mirza Raja Jai Singh (1621-1667) to M.S. Madho Singh II (1880-1922) in an irregular form. Many of these documents are copies only, the originals of which might be elsewhere. However, the available documents have been included in this catalogue as per register maintained in the Kapad-dwara. No register of the maps and plans is found although they bear continuous numbering with red ink. Their details will be published in a separate volume. In this volume, only the documents are included. Though they are important for writing history yet they are not sufficient to construct a complete account. Still we have tried to weave the accounts by annotating the events referred to in them. Writing of history has not been our aim. We have simply presented the material, in a form as we could, with the hope that the scholars and students of history will be benefited and be able to rewrite and throw new light on the history of Jaipur in particular and Mughal India in general.

The present Maharaja S. Bhawani Singhji Sahib Bahadur had been contemplating for a long time to publish the contents of this collection for the use of scholars, who had been frequently approaching him for searching references in their researches. But he could not throw these documents open unless a proper and departmental catalogue was prepared. He, therefore, entrusted this task to us and now it is before the readers in the present form, although late due to many kinds of hurdles that came in our way. We are beholden to Maharaja Sahib's generosity and keen desire, like that of his father to make his collections available for useful purposes.

1. Walterkrit Rajput Hitkarini Sabha was founded by Mr. C.K.M. Walter, Agent to the Governor General in Rajputana. in 1888. He held discussions with the representatives of the States of Rajputana on the question of social reforms. The Sabha framed a number of social regulations by the end of 19th Century. The Rajput and Charan communities residing in Rajputana agreed to observe these regulations. Committees were appointed in almost all major States to watch the implementation of the regulations regarding tyag, tika reet, funeral feasts and marriage ceremonies etc. The limit of expenditure in each case was fixed in proportion to families' income. Marriageable age for boys and girls was prescribed; also guidelines for second marriages and prohibition of polygamy were laid down.

The Jaigarh public charitable Trust under the Chairmanship of the Maharaja Sahib, where a part of this collection remained on temporary loan for a short period, very kindly allowed to publish this work under their aiegis, with a grant from the National Archives of India. Our thanks are due to the Board of Trustees of this Trust and the authorities of the National Archives of India for their generous help.

We express our special gratitude to Hakim Saiyed Muhammad Ahmed Sahib of Tonk who very kindly read out all the Persian and Urdu documents to us. By this we could take down the translation eruditely uttered by him which we abridged and rendered into English. He took sincere interest in this work and rendered all scholarly help that was required of him.

We regret we could not devote enough time to study and correct the names of historical personages and places according to the standardised spellings used by the scholars of history. However, it is hoped that whatever we have done would be suggestive of the facts.

Dr. A.K. Roy, I.A.S. (Retd.) joyfully read and transcribed documents in Bengali script while Sri C.R. Pendharkar helped us in making out the contents of the Marathi documents.

Dr. V.K. Vashishtha and R.S. Mishra of the University of Rajasthan were available to us with their valuable suggestions from time to time. We offer our heartfelt thanks to them.

Pt. Gyarsilalji prepared the press copy and thus he deserves our best thanks.

Our friend Sri S.G. Tewari not only took photographs of the documents but helped a lot in preparing the index. We are grateful to him for this voluntary help.

Sri Sohanlal Jain of Jaipur Printers took special interest in getting the work printed efficiently.

"The crime of murder is usually not pardoned in our country but as the Maharaja has expressed that if some one seeks shelter with him it would be against the tradition and prestige of his family to surrender him. The Nawab Governor General has, therefore, in honour of the Maharaja's sentiments waved off the custom of his country and agreed to save Wazir Ali's life and also not to put him under chains inspite of his being a murderer. The Maharaja, should, therefore, feel assured that nothing would be done against this agreement. Further, a letter to this effect will reach the Maharaja under the seal of the Governor General."

Paper tikalidar and afshani

A square seal of "Mumtaj-ud-daullah Colonel Zaheer-ul-mulk John Collins Saulat Jang Bahadur" on the cover, signed in English by J. Collins, Resident with Daulat Rao Scindia.

6th Safar, 1214 A. H. (July 10, 1799) (on the envelope).

"Details about Wazir Ali have been written in the previous letter at length, still the reality cannot be explained in writing. I am, therefore, sending Inamullah Khan Bahadur, who is a trusted official of mine, to explain all the circumstances to the Maharaja. Further, Wazir Ali Khan may be retained till Inamullah reaches there. Acting against this request would be contrary to our friendly relations."

Paper afshani. Signed in English "J. Collins."

A square seal of John Collins on the cover.

"It is often reported that theft and robbery is committed on the boundary of Jaipur and Karauli. The officials of the Jaipur State should arrest and imprison the offenders. When Rawal Bairisal was in charge of the affairs where had the thieves and robbers gone away ? Now that Sanghi Jhuntharam and his brother hold charge of the state, how have they appeared on the scene ? A factual report sent in this respect together with the accounts of income and expenditure would represent the whole situation. It is a rule that one, who is incompetent to manage the affairs, throws the blames on others' head. The affairs of Jaipur are well known in this respect. A copy of the regulations framed during the time of Gen. Ochterlony is sent herewith. It should be followed strictly. This order of the Nawab Governor-General is for compliance and not for sending a reply to. You are fond of sending a reply of every letter. I am an employee of the Government and shall not forward any reply to Nawab Governor-General against his wishes in future."

with the Maharaja near Ajmer. Two English officers (Fikan Sahib and Mr. Matale....) have been deputed to receive the Maharaja on the border of the state. Paper tiklidar; seal on the envelope. Letter in a kharita.

702. Kharita; Persian (Shikastah); 48.6×15.9 cm.; Agent to the Governor General, R. Cavendish to M.S. Jai Singh III; January 9, 1832.

"The thieves and robbers have been devastating the Shekhawati region by looting the pilgrims and inhabitants. The rulers of the surrounding states have been continuously complaining against them. You are aware that these disturbances have created disorder and given rise to boundary disputes in this territory. In spite of the best efforts there has been no improvement in the situation. Col. Ibrahim Lockett has been, therefore, deputed to control the affairs of that region. He has undertaken and found, on investigation, that the Salehadiwalas and Ladkhanis move in groups and conduct thefts and robberies in the neighbouring places. Sometimes they rob the property and kidnap men and women and then release them after taking a handsome ransom. All this disorder brings a bad name to the state. It is, therefore, hoped that Col. Lockett's scheme would be accepted for suitable action. Rao Raja of Sikar, who occupies the major portion of that territory, may please be sent to Ajmer for consultation".

Paper tiklidar. Seal on the cover, letter in a cover.

suggested that Kota affairs could be settled through Dr. Sahib and Vidyadhar. Had it already been done, the agreement would have been sent to him.

791A. Slip 15.6×9.3 cm.; without date.

In the envelope there is another slip which mentions the presence of the representatives of Udaipur and Jodhpur states together with Pokhar Lal for Rai Hardayal in the A.G.G.'s camp. It also reports about the A.G.G.'s remarks about the childish actions of the Chief of Kishangarh.

792. Letter (in 3 leaves); Hindi - Jaipuri dialect (Devanagari); 40.5×15.2 cm; 16.3×15 cm. (2 leaves); Rai Hardayal to Maharaja; Asoj budi 4, Sunday, 1884 V.S. (A.D. 1832), dispatched early in the morning.

Informs about his confidential interview with the A.G.G. to whom he explained the weak financial position of the state. The A.G.G. demanded the hundi and informed that he had written about the good work done by Sanghi Jhuntharam and that he had recommended also for reducing the amount of the mamla dues.

793. Copy of translation of kharitas; Hindi (Devanagari); 42×14.5 cm. A.G.G. to Maji Sahiba and Sanghi Jhuntharam; May 13, 1831.

Praises Maji Sahiba and Jhuntharam for pardoning the faults of the thakurs and jagirdars.

794. Translation of a Kharita; Hindi - Jaipuri dialect (Devanagari); 25.4×15.4 cm.; Richard Cavendish to Maji Sahiba; August 13, 1831.

Informs that Khushvakhat Rai vakil had fallen ill and so he had been called to Ajmer and his associate mutsaddi had been deputed to Jaipur for writing the news.

795. Copy of a letter; Hindi - Jaipuri dialect (Devanagri); 38×17.6 cm.; R. Cavendish to thakur of Jhilai; December 13, 1830.

"As your son is creating disturbances at the fort of Ranthambhor and he is in league with the rebels, the surety offered by the Government in your case is hereby withdrawn."

(See also no. 782.)

796. Copy of a kharita addressed to Maji Sahiba; Hindi - Jaipuri dialect (Devanagari); 17.6×11 cm.; R Cavendish to Maji Sahiba; December 13, 1830.

"A copy of the reply sent to Thakur Bahadur Singh (of Jhilai) is forwarded herewith for information."

(Also see nos. 782 and 795.)

797 Kharita (copy); Hindi - Jaipuri dialect (Devanagari); 32.3×17 cm ; R. Cavendish to Maji Sahiba; December 31, 1830.

"Copy of a letter written to Rawal Bairisal of Samod in reply to a letter addressed to me is sent herewith for perusal, which is as under :-

"The Government stands surety for your life and property. They have got no jurisdiction to interfere in the cases of theft, etc., committed in your land and the footprints found leading to another man's estate. All such cases fall under the jurisdiction of the Jaipur state. In the circumstances, you may well think that there is no use of your vakil being present in my court."

Note : The thakurs and jagirdars of the Jaipur state were trying to establish direct relations with the British Government. Rawal Bairisal of Samod was a powerful man when he was holding charge of the state. He used to keep his vakil at A.G.G.'s court as Prime Minister but when he was removed from office he still continued his vakil there during the regime of Maji Sahiba's regentship. The A.G.G. had already informed him at the instance of the Maji Sahiba that he was a subordinate of Jaipur state and as such he had no businees to depute his vakil at his court. The British Government was only concerned with the safety of his life and property.

798. Letter; Hindi-Jaipuri dialect (Devanagari); 20.5×18.3 cm.; R. Cavendish to Sanghi Jhuntharam; April 4, 1831; First Baisakh budi 8, 1888 V.S.

Complimentary.

Note : The letter explains how Sanghi Jhuntharam had established close relations with the A.G.G. and also manifests A.G.G.'s favourable attitude towards him.

799. Draft reply to kharita; Hindi-Jaipuri dialect (Devanagari); 21×19.9 cm.; Maji Sahiba to Richard Cavendish; Magh sudi 9, 1887 V.S. (A.D. 1830).

Acknowledges receipt of his letter and agrees to direct the vakil of the sarkar to accompany or depute an official for enquiry at the fort (Sawai Madhopur) held by the government officials there. The surety of such thakurs and jagirdars who were found to be in league with the rebel qiledars might be cancelled.

Note : The qiledars of fort Ranthambhor of Sawai-Madhopur had become rebels under the leadership of Thakur Bahadur Singh of Jhilai. Jaipur state sent forces to subdue the rebels.

The qiledars sought assistance from the British Government who stood as surety for their lives and property. Maji Sahiba was trying to punish the rebels and at last succeeded in bringing round the A G.G. to cancel the surety of such jagirdars who were found guilty of revolt. The thakur of Jhilai apparently sat silent but his son was kindling the fire of revolt in the fort.

800. Draft kharita; Hindi-Jaipuri Dialect (Devanagari); 18×18.5 cm.; Maji Sahiba to Richard Cavendish.

Acknowledges receipt of a covered letter about the plunder of Rs. 35,000/- and other property belonging to Gursahaimal. Informs that necessary instructions and orders had been issued to the mutsaddis concerned and also to the jagirdars involved in the case.

801. Draft reply to the kharita; Hindi - Jaipuri dialect (Devanagari); 22.5×16.2 cm.; Maji Sahiba to A.G.G., Ajmer.

Acknowledges receipt of a letter and informs that news were received through Hardayal's messages regarding complaints against the nephew of Budsuwala. Rao Raja Lakshman Singh and the army had been informed accordingly.

802. Draft reply; Hindi - Jaipuri dialect (Devanagari); 34×16.3 cm.; Maji Sahiba to R. Cavendish; Asoj budi 9, Friday, 1888 V.S.

Acknowledges receipt of a letter and a hundi for Rs. 4,00,000. Further explains the weak financial position of the state due to the heavy expenditure incurred in the case of Madhopur. Expresses her concern about the delay in making payment of the mamla dues. Further entreats to relinquish the remaining amount of Rs. 4,00,000/- as it would prove to be a heavy burden on the state. Expresses her pleasure for the interest taken by the A.G.G., in the uplift and development of the state.

803. Draft kharita; Hindi - Jaipuri dialect (Devanagari); 38×16.5 cm.; Maji Sahiba to Richard Cavendish; Asadh budi 13, Thursday, 1887 V.S.

Acknowledges receipt of a letter demanding compensation for the property plundered at Kota. Informs that on enquiry it was found that the villages Kirmanpura and Rampura held by Devi Singh were looted by the men of Kota. It was, therefore, not proper to demand the compensation from the Jaipur state.

804. Draft reply; Hindi - Jaipuri dialect (Devanagari); 58×16.4 cm.; Maji Sahiba to Richard Cavendish; Asadh budi 13, Thursday, 1887 V.S. (A.D. 1830).

Writes in reply to two kharitas complaining about the thefts and robberies committed in the state villages; also explains the methods adopted by the thieves and robbers. Further requests that steps be taken to suppress them. Orders have been issued to the officials to render all assistance to the British officers who come for enquiry. The Raj-vakil would explain the matters verbally.

805. Draft reply; Hindi - Jaipuri dialect (Devanagari); 44.5×15.7 cm.; Maji Sahiba to Richard Cavendish; Asadh budi 13, Thursday, 1887 V.S. (A.D. 1830).

Acknowledges receipt of a letter together with the report by Faiz Muhammad Khan regarding the plundering of Martin Bahadur. The activities of Rao Raja Fateh Singh in the territory of Tonk were also reported for which Mir Khan had made a complaint. Informs that the village under dispute was granted to Uniara by the Late Maharaja. The authorities of Tonk did not allow him to occupy that land and made complaints against him. Requests the A.G.G. to send instructions to the Nawab of Tonk. The Rao Raja of Uniara was being addressed by the state in the matter.

806. Draft reply; Hindi - Jaipuri dialect (Devanagari); 22×16 cm.; Maji Sahiba to Richard Cavendish; Asadh budi 13, Thursday 1887 V.S. (A.D. 1830).

Writes in reply to a letter informing about the appointment of Mr. Blake for settling the cases of boundary disputes at Delhi. Informs that Shambhu Dayal and Lakshmi Narain were being sent to Delhi for attending the cases in the court of Mr. Blake.

807. Draft reply; Hindi - Jaipuri dialect (Devanagari); 16.4×13.7 cm.; Maji Sahiba to Mr. Martin; Asadh budi 6, 1887 V.S. (A.D. 1830).

"Lakshmi Narain and Shambhu Dayal are being sent, who will remain in your service in connection with the cases dealt with by you."

808. Draft reply; Hindi - Jaipuri dialect (Devanagari); 22.7×17 cm.; Maji Sahiba to the Governor General. Undated.

"You always write that the Maharaja is the Master of his state and he would manage all the affairs thereof. But the Agent, who is subordinate to you, pretends himself as the patron of our subjects. It is all surprising and against the agreement. He may, therefore, be asked not to interfere in the matters of the state on behalf of our subjects."

809. Draft reply; Hindi - Jaipuri dialect (Devanagari); 30.7×16.6 cm.; Maji Sahiba to Mr. Martin; Second Baisakh sudi 4, 1887 V.S. (A.D. 1830).

Acknowledges receipt of a letter. Expresses pleasure on the appointment of Mr. Lockett for suppressing the robbers and murderers It was a matter of great pleasure to suppress such miscreants in the interest of the public and the state. Further informs that Shambhu Dayal was being deputed to assist and attend on Mr. Lockett.

810. Draft reply; Hindi - Jaipuri dialect (Devanagari); 17.2×13 cm.; Maji Sahiba to Mr. Martin; Jyeshth budi 14, Thursday, 1887 V.S. (A.D. 1830).

Acknowledges receipt of a letter and informs that a reliable vakil was being sent to him, as desired.

It bears "श्री" of Maji Sahiba. Fig. 74

811. Note; Hindi - Jaipuri dialect (Devanagari) 47.8×17 cm.; vakil of Jaipur state to Maji Sahiba; Paush budi 6, 1887 V.S (A.D. 1830).

The vakil quotes eight questions put before the A.G.G., relating to the mischiefmongers in the state. The A.G.G., gave a reply to each question which the vakil had noted down against each and has sent the draft to Maji Sahiba for information.

In the end the vakil says that he wrote it at night. Figs. 75-76

812. Draft reply; Hindi - Jaipuri dialect (Devanagari); 33.5×18.3 cm.; Maji Sahiba to Richard Cavendish; Baisakh sudi 6, Monday, 1887 V.S. (A.D. 1830).

Acknowledges receipt of a letter stating that Col. Lockett was coming to suppress the robbers, Ladkhanis, Kaimkhanis and Salehadiwalas. A reliable official from the state would remain to assist the Colonel. It was known from akhbar (news) that the Colonel was staying at Bhusawar. Requests that the date of his arrival might be intimated so that the vakil might join him in the military camp of the Company and stresses that the friendship between the state and the Company Government could only flourish by mutual consultations in matters of importance.

813. Draft reply; Hindi - Jaipuri dialect (Devanagari); 31.6×19 cm.; Maji Sahiba to R. Cavendish; Jyeshth sudi 5, Tuesday, 1887 V.S. (A.D. 1830).

Acknowledges receipt of kharita regarding appointment of a vakil at Delhi and also of a kharita from A.G.G., at Delhi to the same effect. Further states that all other states had come to know of it. Deputation of a vakil from Jaipur was necessary because the representatives of Marwar, Bikaner, Alwar and Karauli always remained there and submitted false complaints which would be duly met with then and there (by the Jaipur vakil).

814. Draft reply; Hindi - Jaipuri dialect (Devanagari); (1) 53×17 cm.; (2) 49.5×16.2 cm.; Maji Sahiba to R. Cavendish; Asadh sudi 9, Monday, 1887 V.S. (A.D. 1830).

Acknowledges receipt of a kharita and explains with examples in detail that all mischief of thefts and robbery, etc., was committed due to the undue patronage extended by the Company Government. This was against the agreement. Further establishes that law and order in the state was much better than before.

Acknowledges receipt of a kharita with a copy of Rawal Bairisal's letter. Explains with examples that the Rawal's actions were not in accordance with what he wrote in his letters. Bhagirath Singh was staying at Samod and his son Hanumant was creating disturbances at Madhopur.

816 Draft reply; Hindi - Jaipuri dialect (Devanagari); 51×18.4 cm.; Maji Sahiba to Richard Cavendish

Undated.

Acknowledges receipt of two letters regarding suppression of the thieves and robbers. Complains that formerly the thieves were captured on the spot inside and outside the state. But later, this could not be done without the permission of the British authorities. The Resident, in the state, was asked repeatedly to look into such affairs but he overlooked Col. Clock, when he was in the state, took bribes and set the robbers free with the looted property. In the circumstances, it was very difficult to establish peace and order. Fig. 79

817. Draft reply; Hindi - Jaipuri dialect (Devanagari); 39×14.5 cm.; Maji Sahiba to Richard Cavendish; Second Baisakh sudi 4, Sunday 1887 V.S. (A.D. 1830).

Acknowledges receipt of a letter regarding payment of compensation to the men of Kota state for the property plundered there. Reiterates that the cases should be decided with mutual agreement with the state. Rai Har Dayal, the vakil would explain the actual facts of the case.

818. Kharita—two leaves—draft reply; Hindi-Jaipuri dialect (Devanagari); (1) 65×24.7 cm.. (2) 24×28 cm; Maji Sahiba to Richard Cavendish; Magh sudi 9, Saturday, 1887 V.S. (A.D. 1831).

Acknowledges receipt of a letter and explains in detail the procedure for the qiledars and other employees of the forts laid down by the late Maharaja Madho Singhji I. The employees and the qiledars posted in a fort had to offer surety at the time of appointment and the preparation of identity sheet (चेहरा). The deels (सिपाही) were employed partly by the qiledars and partly by khalsa (state). Their identity sheets were approved by the officers at the capital. The deels had to deposit a sum of twelve rupees in the state treasury and then only a letter of appointment was issued. The deels appointed by the qiledars were allowed entrance in the fort only on producing a khas ruqqa from the authority at Jaipur. The same rule was held good in case of transfers. Those who were employed in the city had to produce a letter of authority. The term of appointment lasted according to the sanction issued from the capital. They had to come back whenever called from the capital. The qiledars enjoyed villages in lieu of service and pay to other employees was distributed monthly by the amils and mutsaddis.

The jamanatdars arrested the amil and appointed their own at Madhopur. They also collected revenue, appointed soldiers without sanction, organised platoons of their own, occupied some villages, captured the inhabitants and shut them in the fort. They had also cut down noses and hands of some captives, killed the amil and looted the fort-treasury. Still some long rope was given and it was hoped that the matter would be settled according to the advice of the Major.

Informs that Ramnath Purohit was against the state and an arrear of several lakhs was outstanding against him. He was in league with the robbers and created disturbances in Khetri. Ultimately he migrated to Narnol. If he would be allowed to enter in the boundary of the state he would again create disturbances. Mr. Lockett might, therefore, be instructed not to bring him with himself.

Acknowledges receipt of a letter through the Agent, Major John Low Bahadur. Pleads that Chand Lal, vakil of the state, who reached there without a kharita, was a state employee, who had served at his (A.G.G.'s) court even before. None else could dare appear without permission. The reason for not sending a kharita is explained that the Major Bahadur was understood to be pleading from the Company side and hence he was sent immediately. Formerly an intimation was used to be sent by the Nawab Sahib (G.G.), but this time it was not received through the A.G.G. or the Resident and hence the delay. Further, it is confirmed that the friendship between the Company Government and the state stood fast.

Explains that all proper arrangements for entertaining the British officers were made when they passed through the state (Jaipur) and they all expressed their satisfaction for the arrangements. It was, therefore, wrong to complain that satisfactory arrangements were not made.

Damaged.

823. Draft kharita; Hindi - Jaipuri dialect (Devanagari); 30×16.4 cm.; Maji Sahiba to Mr. Martin. Undated.

Expresses pleasure at his arrival at Delhi for management of important affairs.

826. Draft kharita; Hindi - Jaipuri dialect (Devanagari); 39.3 x 15.7 cm.; Maji Sahiba to Richard Cavendish. Undated.

"Received your letter with the copy of your correspondence with Lakshman Singh The surety becomes null and void from the date of Kishan Singh's death. Information to this effect was forwarded as an enclosure to Major Sahib's letter. The tradition is that a successor is not valid until the matmi is performed. Major Sahib was accordingly informed that a sanction to the successor would be accorded only on realisation of Rupees 2,00,000/-. Major Sahib made recommendation for Rupees 80,000/- only. Neither this amount has been paid nor the required number of horses render service and the formality of matmi has also not been performed. Hence, the new successor would be recognised only when the matmi is performed. This procedure is observed even in the case of real sons while he is an adopted one. A qiladar deputed from the thikana side is creating disturbances. He was advised to withdraw from such activities but he does not seem to abstain from them. Qiledari has been granted to the thakur – then why should he act against the khalsa (state) rules. He should be removed immediately and it should be noticed that we had agreed for Rupees 80,000/- only instead of Rupees 2,00,000/- while he is not giving up his evil ways nor has paid the settled amount as yet."

827. Kharita-(draft copy); Hindi–Jaipuri dialect (Devanagari); 95 x 15.5 cm.; Maharaja (S. Madho Singh II) to A.G.G.

Informs that the news of his arrival was received with great pleasure.

828. Letter (copy); Hindi - Jaipuri dialect (Devanagari); 64 x 21 cm.; Lakshman Singh Nathawat of Chomu to Richard Cavendish.

Acknowledges receipt of two letters :—

One regarding the matmi case in which Rs. 80,000/- were demanded by the state. Major Low Sahib arranged a meeting of his (thakur's) employees and Sanghi Jhuntharam, who agreed to realise the settled amount in instalments in spite of the representation that only 50,000/- were fixed as matmi dues in the past.

The second letter pertained to a complaint against him (thakur) that he was conniving to collect the jagirdars against the state. Explains that he was a well-wisher of the state and only conferred with 4-5 sardars about the heavy expenses met by the state on meeting with the muhims (expeditions) from outside while the kinsmen were avoided. Further says that he was sitting silent due to unfavourable times.

829. Copy of kharita (draft); Hindi—Jaipuri dialect (Devanagari); 125.5 x 14.9 cm.; Maji Sahiba to R. Cavendish. Undated.

Expresses pleasure at the judicious attitude of the A.G.G., which was expected from him. Also acknowledges receipt of the copy of a letter sent by him to Rawal Bairisal and commends his efforts to reconciliate the Rawal with the state.

830. Draft kharita (two drafts on one sheet of paper); Hindi–Jaipuri dialect (Devanagari); Maji Sahiba to R. Cavendish, Undated.

Forwards a copy of kharita addressed to the Governor-General and requests to pursue for a reply to the same. Further, objects to the British interference in the internal affairs of the state especially in case of the relations of the state with the thakurs.

The second letter :—

"Some time ago Ranjit Singh of Dhula went to Madhopur with his retinue and fought with the state forces. Your chobdars, chaprasis and the maulvi were also witnesses to the scene. There was no strictness from the state on him. All his horses were not rendering services. Only fifty or sixty horses were reported at Torawati which were also withdrawn by him without permission of the state. Therefore, his surety should be cancelled "

831. Kharita (draft copy); Hindi–Jaipuri dialect (Devanagari) 35.4×16 cm.; Maji Sahiba to R. Cavendish. Undated.

"Received two letters from you and noted that the surety of the thakur of Jhilai has been cancelled. Copies of letters addressed by Rawal Bairisal and Bahadur Singh have also been received. This practice is convincing and appreciable. The thakurs and jagirdars should not be encouraged to approach the Company Government directly. Copies of your letter have been issued to all the jagirdars of the state and their vakils have been asked to note."

832. Kharita (draft copy); Hindi–Jaipuri dialect (Devanagari); 37×21 cm.; Maji Sahiba to Richard Cavendish; Baisakh Sudi 7, Monday 1887 V.S. (A.D. 1831).

"Persons who are in charge of the fort of Ranthambhor plundered the village Chenda of Kota and Bundi states. The state forces have not been successful in punishing them so far. Rawal Bairisal is at the root of all this evil. The situation can not be controlled until his surety is cancelled. Further details will be known verbally from Rai Hardayal."

833. Copy kharita; reply; Hindi - Jaipuri dialect (Devanagari) 40.5×15 cm.; Maji Sahiba to A.G.G., Delhi and Ajmer and to the Governor General, undated.

To the Governor General :—

"The news of your visit was received with great pleasure. The period of your stay here may kindly be intimated. Mr. Cavendish at Ajmer attends to the affairs of this state with great interest. He may also be permitted to visit Jaipur."

To the A.G.G. at Delhi :—

"The news of your appointment at Delhi as Agent to the Governor-General was received with great pleasure. A letter of congratulations was sent earlier. Mr. Richard Cavendish is attending to the affairs of this state on behalf of the Company Government. As he is an interested worker, he also may be allowed to visit Jaipur. A letter in this respect is also sent to the Governor General."

To the A.G.G. at Ajmer :—

"Kharitas addressed to the Governor General and Mr. Martin are sent herewith for endorsement to the addressees. Your interest in this state is increasing day by day. Please keep on the correspondence regularly."

Refers to the information conveyed by Champaram Diwan and suggests that an alliance among themselves at such a juncture would enhance their importance with Daulat Rao Scindia and Holkar Daulat Rao badly needed their help. Further adds that they should also try to bring the rulers of Kota, Bundi, Jodhpur and Udaipur in this alliance. If they do not agree to join, they should make efforts by themselves. Efforts should also be made to unite the British with them. If this was done it would not be impossible to bring the entire kingdom under their control.

1040. Letter; Hindi (Devanagari); 48.5×8.5 cm.; Paraji to Khawas Rodaram; Shravan budi 11, 1853 V.S. (July 30, 1796).

Informs that a reply to his letter had already been sent in detail through Mishra (Jiwanram). Assures that he was a well-wisher of the state. Further that Champaram Mahajan had borrowed Rs. 200/- from him which might be recovered and sent.

Paper afshani.

1041. Letter; Hindi (Devanagari); 65.5×17.5 cm.; Pant Paraji to Khawas Rodaram; Asadh sudi 10, 1853 V.S. (July 14, 1796).

Informs that Mishra Jiwanram had conveyed the message sent by him (Khawas Rodaram). The work would be taken in hand after the month of Kartik and then necessary information would be sent. The delay for two months was caused due to the receipt of a delayed reply from the addressee, which reached there after writer's departure from the spot. Further informs that the rains were heavy in Konkan and so the military activities had to be withheld. The heavy work in hand could not be disposed of without five sardars. Negotiations had been finalised between Nana Sahib and Nawab Sahib and seven gentlemen and Pirzadas were being sent to him accordingly.

Damaged.

1042. Letter; Hindi (Devanagari); 64.5×18 cm.; Pant Paraji to Khawas Rodaram. Undated.

"Tantya paganawis is incharge of all the affairs here. He is totally in our favour. It is, therefore, that Mishra (Jiwanram) has been sent with all the information. It would be better if Bohra Mangiram or any other gentleman remains present here at the time of the matampursi of Patel Sahib. If the formal articles for the matampursi are sent from there it is well and good, otherwise arrangements can be made locally.

Champaram Mahajan had taken a loan of Rs. 200/- from us, which may please be recovered and sent to us through Mishra Jiwanram."

Contents of the first part of the letter are same as those of no. 1041.

Damaged. Three seals in Nagari on the cover; letters illegible.

1043. Letter; Hindi (Devanagari); 69×18 cm.; Pant Paraji to Bohra Dinaram; Asadh sudi 10, 1853 V.S. (July 14, 1796).

The contents of this letter are the same as those of no. 1041. Adds that other details can not be written in the letter, the same will be reported verbally by the Mishra (Jiwanram).

Damaged.

1044. Letter; Hindi (Devanagari); 30.6×15.5 cm.; Nana Sahib to Khawas Rodaram; Asadh sudi 3, 1853 V.S. (July 7, 1796).

Regrets that no reply to Paraji's letter was received in writing, though Mishraji was informed that he (addressee) was ready with all the sardars. As no letter signed and sealed by himself (khawas) and by the chiefs was received, the words of Mishra could not be relied upon. Assures that if he was ready and sincerely willing, he (the writer) was also prepared to serve him and that the suba of Malwa would come under his (khawas') possession.

Paper decorative, golden "द्वारशाखा और तोरण".

1045. Letter; Hindi (Devanagari); 48.2×18.4 cm.; Diwan Para Raoji to Bohra Dinaram; Shravan budi 13, 1853 V.S. (August 1, 1796).

"A complete reply to your letter received through Mishra (Jiwanram) had been sent already. Further, you might have learnt about Tantyaji paganawis and reported the same to the master (Maharaja), other details might have been known verbally through the Mishra. The iron must be hit when it is hot and it is, therefore, that Tantya is made to take our side. We are the well-wishers of the Maharaja. We know it well that the friendship and brotherly relations between us and the Maharaja can make us victorious in Hindustan. Necessary kharitas may, therefore, be sent in the name of Daulat Rao Tukoji Rao Holkar, Parasram Bhau and Tantya Sahib It would be better that some presents and dresses of honour are sent with the letters or kharitas to both Tantya and Parasram Bhau as they can prove to be much helpful to us. Please send a reply soon. Daulatram Haldia is here as your representative and his letter has been received by Nana Sahib. But it is known to Nana Sahib how fair his dealings were with Tukoji Holkar. De Boigne is his friend but Perron is more powerful here. I have written to you because we are well-wishers of the Maharaja. But we are helpless if the Maharaja himself does not understand.

Champaram Mahajan had taken Rs. 200/- as loan from us, for which we have already written. Kindly realise this amount from him and send it to us. Kindly attract Zalim Singh of Kota to our side by writing letters, etc."

1046. Letter; Hindi (Devanagari); 31.5×16 cm.; Nana Sahib to Bohra Dinaram; Asadh sudi 3, 1853 V.S. (July 7, 1796).

"Messages have already been sent in the previous letter of Pandit Paraji. We were waiting for a reply but the same has not been received as yet. The Maharaja is very wise and a great king; he can do whatever he likes. We, in Hindustan, are his servants and ready to help him. It has been reported in the newsletter that the camp has been lifted but we should have been consulted before doing so. It is good that Mishra Jiwanramji has reached here with your brother. We have full confidence in you and hope that you will report the matter to the Maharaja and let us know about his decision. You should inform us about the attitude of his nobles and chiefs also. We have no differences with Nawab Sahib. Saifu Mian Pirzada is, therefore, coming to you with the Mishra. All matters may, therefore, be settled with Saifu Mian and a kharita may be sent to Nawab Sahib accordingly. You should not worry about the expenses on the army. If you remain firm there will be no deficiency of money and land with you. Everything will be disposed of through you. The Mishra will deliver verbal message and a definite reply may be sent early."

Submitted many applications but unfortunately received no reply since the writer had been separated from the presence of the Maharaja. Assures that he was ready to be present for service whenever remembered by the Maharaja. Informs that he was in the service of Nawab Amir-ul-Umra in Bengal. The Nawab very graciously granted him a salary of Rs. 1000/- per month and also awarded some amount in cash. As the climate of Bengal was not suitable to him (the writer), he came back to Agra, and there maintained himself with whatever he had received from the Nawab. The Maharaja was well aware with the services rendered by the petitioner under Nawab Madarul Muham Mirza. Further requests that he was unable to bear the expenses of one thousand sawars being out of employment and entreats that imperial orders may be sought to relinquish the maintenance of one thousand sawars imposed on him. Concludes with following doha:—

रामचरण हिय में धरत, बलभदासन दास ।

Shyama Charan Sharma to M.S. Jai Singh.

That Chaitanya Mahaprabhu with his six arms (six major disciples) was the incarnation of Sri Krishna, Lord of Braj. It has been proved by the facts described by Prabodhanand Saraswati in his Chaitanya Charitamrita, and supported by Sarvabhauma Bhattacharya, Sanatan Goswami, Rup Goswami, Jiva Goswami, Gadadhar Pandit, Goswami Narhari Sarkar and Sridhar Swami etc. in their works.

1519 (a) Gopinath and Shyamacharan Sharma say, "Chaitanya Mahaprabhu has endorsed the views of Nimbaditya Acharya. Srimad-Bhagvata is the real commentary of the Brahmasutras though these sutras are not commented upon serially. We, therefore, agree that Maharajadhiraj should commission a sutrawise commentary with quotations from the Bhagavata. The commentary should be based on the tika by Sridhar Swami and the Bhagavata Sandarbha Tika.

Ramnath Deva Sharma, son of Sri Krishnadeva Goswami Bhattacharya, born in the family of Sri Manu Goswami, who descended from Gadadhar, a follower of Chaitanya Mahaprabhu, declares, "the treatises compiled by Sri Maharajadhiraj are based on the old Vaishnava granthas. The Maharaja is the propounder of Bhaktimarg which is not against Shrutis and Smritis He is the performer of five Ashvamedha yajnas. The doctrines explained in Jnan Vivriti, Karma Vivriti, Bhakti Vivriti and Sidhhantaikya-prakashika are agreed by all and followed traditionally."

1524. Sammatipatra; Sanskrit (Devanagari and Tamil); 30.2×13.8 cm ; Undated.
Tridandiji to M.S. Jai Singh.
According to the Ramanuj theory Bhagavad-rupa is both attributed and non-attributed. The Jiva is attributed while the Supreme soul is not bound by attributes. But they are not separate from one another. Therefore, hot branding and cold branding are justified because the body is jada (matter) and the branding does not affect the soul.

1525. Sammatipatra; Sanskrit (Devanagari); 20.8×15.5 cm.; Undated.
Krishnadeva Sarvabhauma Bhattacharya, Keshav Dikshit and Shesh Yadav to M.S. Jai Singh.
State that Brahman is all pervading. He adopts the saguna attributed form on account of His latent power which manifests at His will. Therefore, the Power and the Powerful are not different from one another. The principle of Bhedabhed is thus explained.

Writes that Yashwant Rao Holkar could not face the victorious forces of the British and fled away beyond Sutluz. It was reported by Gen. Johnson, who was leaving for his homeland, that the forces of the Jaipur State did very well. Further requests that the forces could now be withdrawn and would be called again, if required.

Paper tiklidar afshani

1683. Memorandum; English; 33.6×21 cm.; September 23, 1827. Political Agent, John Low to Maji Sahiba Chandravatji.

Writes that he wanted to obtain audience with the Maji Sahiba herself at the purdah, in order to convey His Lordship's orders dated August 25, 1827 personally. (Though she agreed to it but denied to continue such a practice in future.)

1684. Kharita, translation of no. 1680; Persian; 37.4×15.5 cm.; December 7, 1832. Lord W. Bentinck to Maji Sahiba Chandravatji.

Writes that Sanghi Jhuntharam had been in his camp for a long time. The writer had advised him to return to Jaipur as his absence might be causing much inconvenience in the matters of the State.

Paper tiklidar afshani.

1685. Kharita; Persian; 31.3×15 cm.; October 7, 1803. George Lake to Maji Sahiba Chandravatji.

Wonders that not a single word of appreciation was written in her letter about the terms and conditions laid down in the agreement with the Company Government. Assures that nothing had been written in the agreement which might go against the benefits of the State. It was expected that Maji Sahiba would write in appreciation of it so that the Company Government (British) might extend further facilities and help. This would have been in the interest of the State. Further requests that some reliable man might be sent to him so that everything might be explained through him.

Paper tiklidar afshani.

his proposal made under his seal and signatures to the Commander-in-Chief who was in Avadh in those days. He would devise means which would be applicable in case of disagreement between Daulat Rao Scindia and the British Company. The writer further advises the Maharaja to send a reliable person who would try to confirm the agreement and may be helpful in negotiating between the Maharaja and the C-in-C. Further informs that a copy of the document was being sent to Maharaja Bhim Singh of Jodhpur so that he might also join in the proposed agreement.

Paper tiklidar and plain.

1689 (A) Terms of the agreement—

1. Friends and foes of one party will be friends and foes of the other party.
2. In case a war breaks out between Daulat Rao Scindia and the Company Government, the Maharaja would act and organise his forces according to the instructions of the Commander-in-Chief of the Company's army
3. The Company Government undertakes to help and assist the Maharaja in maintaining his possession over the territories under him. Also, the Company Government undertakes to help and assist the Maharaja in exercising his full rights and privileges.
4. If any other condition would be laid down under the terms of this agreement the same would be agreeable to both the parties.

"Full consideration and co-operation is given to the present management of the State which is pledged to the benefit of the Maharaja and the safety of public."

Paper tiklidar afshani.

1695. Kharita (3 folia); Persian; 48.5×15.6 cm.; March 8, 1832. Lord Bentinck from Agra to M.S. Jai Singh III.

Informs that the Secretary to the Governor General had already replied to all the points raised by the Maharaja in his kharita. However, the same are repeated for ready reference—

1. The Resident would not act in a way detrimental to the affairs of the State.
2. No sardar or thakur would contact with the Resident directly without the permission of the Maharaja. The Maharaja would have full powers to take action against the defaulters.
3. Also, he would exercise powers to appoint and dismiss the officials of the State.

The Resident would not interfere in the internal matters of the State. In case he acts otherwise, the Maharaja could write directly to the Governor General.

Paper tiklidar afshani.

1696. Kharita; English; 22.7 × 18.4 cm.; January 22, 1841 Robert O'Dowda from Calcutta to Maji Sahiba Chandravatji.

Writes that Pandit Kristo Kishor had been talking with him about the management of the State. The writer was willing to undertake the responsibility but advised the Maji Sahiba to write to the Governor General-in-Council first.

1697. Kharita (3 folia); Persian; 47.8 × 15 cm.; Undated. Lord William G. Bentinck, Governor General to M.S. Jai Singh III.

"Sanghi Jhuntharam has come to me with your letter to discuss some major cases of the State. After carefully going through the case of Rawal Bairisal Singh I find that the allegations have been framed by his enemies. Rawal Sahib is one of those sardars, whose protection has been undertaken by the British Government. It would be better if the controversies between the State and Rawal Sahib were cleared off. Sanghiji apprehends that Rawal Sahib was trying to take over his post but I think it is not correct. Rawal Sahib would not, in any way, act against his overlord. I am writing to the Resident to press Rawal Sahib to present as many horses for service as are required of him.

Questions raised by you against Rawal Sahib will be replied after investigations.
